Conference Honors Successful Producers

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — One large-scale dairy producer/grazier put it this way for about 200 producers and agribusiness people Wednesday:

Your farm is "almost like an artistic canvas," said Charlie Opitz, dairy producer from Mineral Point, Wis. "The species you work with are your paint. And the cows are your paintbrush."

Opitz spoke about what many graziers recognize as "grass fever," he said. "Once you catch it, it'll stay with you until you're dead."

Opitz spoke Wednesday morning at the beginning of the two-day 2002 Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Grantville Holiday Inn. The conference is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) and the Penn State Grazing Research and Education Center.

Opitz, whose farm partnership pastures 1,200 cows, noted his family began farming in 1832 near Milwaukee, Wis. Through the years, the farm moved north to Saukville, Wis., with additional expansion. In 1979 his wife Dorothy and Mark, Janis, and Jenni moved to the Mineral Point Farm.

Major advancements occurred in 1978, 1986, and 1991, increasing the farm size, going back to pasture again with milk cows, and additional acreage. Now, the farm includes about 1,400 acres, including a 900-cow freestall in the middle of 600 acres.

In 1993 the farm partnership purchased a double-27 swing parlor in the middle of an 800-acre parcel. The parlor, including everything except labor, cost $140,000.

Dairy herd averages are 15,000 pounds per cow at 3.4 percent protein and 3.8-4.2 butterfat.

The farm milks Holstein/Jersey crossbreds. Opitz said he liked using Jerseys because of improved heat tolerance, cold tolerance, and "better legs," he said.

Opitz provided details of his pasture maintenance. He said that between two to four times per year, nitrogen is applied to improve feed quality. The hay doesn't move more than 500 feet

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — American Farm Bureau Federation President Bob Stallman will speak at a meeting hosted by the southeast region of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau here March 16.

Stallman will breakfast with the Lehigh Valley Grain Marketing Club, then join in a tour of local ag operations including a greenhouse, a mushroom facility, and a dairy farm.

At the evening banquet, Stallman's talk will focus on the Farm Bill and agriculture trade policy, according to American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) director of communications Bill Eckmann.

U.S. House and Senate conferees were recently selected to negotiate differences between the Senate bill passed in February and a House version passed last fall.

Nutrient Management Board: Keep Regulations Simple

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Phosphorus management, regulation of exported manure, and conservation planning were key issues discussed at a meeting of the Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Advisory Board here recently.

Doug Goodlander, nutrient management director of the State Conservation Commission (SCC), presented the board with a list of "possible refinements" to the Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Act scheduled for revision and legislative review later this year.

The group covered six of 20 agenda items during the six-hour meeting.

"Simplify" was one of the chief requests made regarding the proposed changes.

Board members and others at the meeting expressed concerns about regulations becoming overly burdensome for farmers and agents.

A proposal that would require "exported" manure to be shipped only to farms with an approved nutrient management plan (NMP) or importer plan would seriously hamper the distribution of manure, according to various board members.

Noting that the board continues to support certification of manure haulers, Goodlander

Public Perceptions Force Changes In Legislation, Poultry Industry

LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Competition for poultry producers used to mean vying for customers with other producers, but today, competition includes consumer groups and government agencies demands, said Dr. Gregory Martin, extension multi-county poultry specialist.

Martin was one of the many professionals speaking at Poultry Progress Day conducted at the Farm and Home Center, Thursday.

Producers are facing discrimination in trade and in the U.S., Ken Kleppen said. In his job to analyze government regulations and reduce confusion for producers, Kleppen said an increasing amount of regulations and concerns are against the industry because of unfair perceptions.

Science used to be the gauge

Silage Spreaders with a Heritage of Quality

Lancaster Level-Flo has been the leader in non-motorized silage spreaders for more than 25 years. Each spreader is specifically designed to meet the needs of the individual operator.

Choose the spreader that best matches the equipment you use to fill your silo.

The Model 1030 Multi-Flo® is our standard silage spreader With a 9" gooseneck, it is designed for average capacity blowers and silo sizes

The Model 1200 Multi-Flo® has a 12" wide gooseneck Its larger size all but eliminates plugging problems, even when you blow in haylage It is especially helpful in larger silos

The BlueMax is built for those who push high-capacity silo filling equipment to the limit All parts of the BlueMax subject to wear are made 25% heavier - and the stainless steel plate is twice as heavy For strength, there are reinforcements all around Even our well-known non-binding hinge is heavier

BORROWED DAYS

"March borrowed of April April borrowed of May Three days they say One rained and one snew (sic) / And the other was the worst that ever blew These borrowed days or borrowing days as Sir Walter Scott called them are said to be unseasonably stormy Some say that they are the last three days in March others claim that they can come at any time or simply near the end of the month One story is that a shepherd promised March a lamb if he would temper the winds to shelter the flocks March complied but the shepherd did not pay So March borrowed three days from April and blew even fiercer winds Similarly blackthorn winds followed by blackthorn winter in late March or early April herald a spring cold snap that often coincides with the flowering of the blackthorn tree

OPINION

Grow Wholesale, Sell Retail

News item: Lancaster County ranks number 3 in the U.S. in direct sales to individuals for human consumption.

A couple of weeks ago I attended the Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference (MADMC) and Trade Show at the Holiday Inn, York.

With about 400 in attendance, the seminar rooms were packed — jam-packed, with little or no standing room.

Attendees listened to an array of speakers trying to find ways simply to do this:

Grow or manufacture a product and sell it directly to the consumer.

For too many years, farmers have been "buying resale and selling wholesale," growing a product and hoping for the best price at the auction. But with farm markets, roadside stands, and even Internet retailing, farmers can bypass the "middle person," can absorb all stocking fees or licensing space fees, and can reap the benefits and the profits directly by going right to the consumer.

This is a grand approach. Many people have found it a successful one.

I spoke with Marc Tosiano, state statistician with the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, and found out some interesting facts.

In 1992, according to Tosiano, Lancaster County was ranked number 1 in the country in direct sales. But California counties expanded their operations considerably since then.

By the way, the top counties: San Diego, Calif., number 1, and San Joaquin, Calif., number 2.

Today, not only is Lancaster County ranked third in the country for those direct sales, but other counties fill in some top spots, some within the top 50. According to the 1997 Census of Agriculture, Chester County ranks 13, Berks 19, York 22, Adams 23, Westmoreland 36, Bucks 40, and Erie 48. Franklin ranks 64, Washington 72, Indiana 78, Schuylkill 84, and Beaver County ranks 92.

As a whole, Pennsylvania ranks second in the country (beaten by, of course, California), with sales of $48.7 million in direct sales for human consumption. California ranks first at $179 million.

According to PASS data, as of September 20001, the top six commodities in Pennsylvania for 2000 were milk ($1.5 billion in sales), cattle and calves ($393.4 million in sales), mushrooms, Agaricus (white-button variety) ($331.8 million), nursery and greenhouse ($311.9 million), eggs ($287.2 million), and broilers ($242.6 million).

Lancaster Farming wants to be a part of that growth. As for direct marketing, we contribute with the publication of our Grower & Marketer section, included this issue.

For any comments about our special sections, or about how we cover direct marketing events, give me a call here at (717) 721-4425.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

The Farm Bill will not prevent a roller coaster ride for dairy farmers.

As a result of the sincere efforts of Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), dairy farmers will finally realize some direct benefits as the result of federal legislation.

Ever since the spring of 1981, when the U.S. Congress passed special legislation which prevented the U.S. secretary of agriculture from adjusting the support price on manufactured milk products, any legislation passed by Congress (except two giveaways) resulted in continued decreases in the milk support price and/or large assessments levied on dairy farmers.

These reductions in prices coupled with the assessments have cost the average dairy farmer more than $300,000 since 1981.

Most people now realize that the Senate's version of the proposed Farm Bill, among other things, places a $16.94 per hundredweight floor under the Class I price (milk used for fluid purposes) for the 12 northeastern

Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Implement A Drought Emergency Plan

Despite a recent welcome rain, the drought crisis continues to worsen. Many farms have experienced wells going dry or wells failing to supply sufficient water. This problem is compounded by the fact that well drillers are so busy most have a waiting period of two or more weeks before they can drill a new well. If you are depending on wells for supplying water for your livestock, it would be wise to develop a backup supply now before your existing well goes dry.

The first step you should take is to hire a hydrogeologist to assist you in identifying the best places on your farm to locate a well. While this does not guarantee you will get a high-producing well, an experienced hydrogeologist can increase the probability of finding a good supply significantly.

These scientists use a number of different techniques to locate high probability locations for well drilling. One of the techniques is fracture trace mapping. Using old aerial photographs of your property, the consultant looks for hints in the landscape to indicate where underground water bearing fractures may exist. The next step if there are indications of fractures on the images is to go to the field and identify those locations in the field.

If your farm is located in Lancaster County, you have the added tool of using infrared images of the county taken during the drought of 1999. These images can be used to spot these fractures also and are located in the county's Geographic Information System (GIS) department.

To find a hydrogeologist, look in your yellow pages under geology. Call those listed there and inquire if they do this consulting and check with several concerning their charges. As with any business contract, ask for references. If you can't find any consultants, call the Lancaster County Extension Office and ask for a list of hydrogeologists at (717) 394-6851. With the high cost of drilling, investing in some professional advice to reduce the risk of drilling a dry hole is a good risk management strategy.

After you have located some potential sites for drilling, I recommend you go ahead and schedule the drilling of a backup well if you don't already have more than one source. If your single well fails and you aren't able to get a new one drilled for several weeks, the consequences could be devastating. After you have drilled the well, you have the option of waiting to install the pump. This could be done quickly if you get into water supply difficulty later.

Whenever you drill a well you should follow good construction techniques to prevent the borehole from becoming a source of groundwater contamination. The first and commonly applied step is to stall steel or PVC casing to bedrock. What is not commonly done but is just as important is to pressure grout the casing. This involves injecting under pressure a mortar mix that includes bentonite clay between the outside of the casing and the soil. This mixture expands as it dries and will seal off the space between the casing and the soil. If this is left unsealed, surface water could pass down along the outside of the casing and contaminate your well. Check with your driller to see if they are equipped to do this and choose one that is prepared to complete this part of the job.

Another important step in preparing for drought is acquiring crop insurance. This year catastrophic coverage (which will pay damages if more than 50 percent of your crop is lost) is free, but you must sign up with a crop insurance agent. Check with your Farm Service Agency office or your local extension office for a list of agents who carry this insurance. You will also be able to buy higher levels of coverage at subsidized rates. You need to act promptly, since the deadline to sign up spring-planted crops is March 15.

To Be Aware Of The Extent Of Unusual Weather Trends/ The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) reports that our nation has just completed the warmest winter on record (November 2001 through January 2002). The January global temperature was the warmest in the 123-year surface record.

Using the world's largest weather database, NOAA scientists calculated conditions for the past three months. "Unusual warmth persisted across a large part of the contiguous United States during the past three months, resulting in the warmest November through January since national records began in 1895," said Jay Lawrimore, chief of NOAA's Climate Monitoring Branch at the Asheville NC center.

The preliminary nationally averaged temperature was 39.94 degrees F (4.41 degrees C), which was 4.3 degrees F (2.4 degrees C) above the 1895-2001 long-term mean. The previous record for the same three-month period was established in 1999-2000. Since 1976, the nationally averaged November-January temperature has risen at a rate of 1.2 degrees F (0.7 degrees C) per decade. During the most recent three-month period, much above-average warmth stretched from as far west as Montana and Oklahoma to the East Coast. Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Massachusetts, and Vermont had their warmest November to January, and as many as 18 states from the Plains to the Northeast recorded their second warmest November-January.

In that region, numerous daily high-temperature records were established, and the warmth coincided with below-normal snowfall. A lack of snow cover contributed to short-term drought conditions in the northern Plains. Absence of snow has affected many winter festivals in the northern U.S.

The three-month Residential Energy Demand Temperature Index (November-January) was the lowest on record, reflecting reduced energy demand because of the unusually warm temperatures. This index, which has values from zero to 100, measures year-to-year fluctuations in residential energy demand that result from variations in temperature in the contiguous U.S., especially those that occur in the most heavily populated areas. An index value of 100, the greatest temperature-related energy demand for the November-January period, occurred in 1976-1977, while the past three months registered an index value of zero.

Although precipitation was near normal nationwide from November to January, an area of below-normal precipitation stretched from Florida to Maine, worsening drought conditions along the East Coast. Connecticut and Maine experienced their driest November-January on record and nine other states (New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia, Virginia, and South Carolina) were much drier than normal. At the end of January, moderate to severe drought conditions were widespread from southern Georgia to Maine.

APPALLING SIN, AMAZING GRACE

Background Scripture:
Romans 3.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 33:13-32.

Thomas Carlyle says that the "deadliest sins" are "the consciousness of no sin." When we think we are relatively free from sin, then we are most vulnerable to it. That is why "respectable people" so rarely are aware of their sins. We mistake respectability for righteousness — and they are not the same.

In fact, respectability may become a substitute for righteousness. Respectability is founded upon what others think of us according to various societal standards. For example, I'm sure that most of you my readers are respectable. You probably do not kill, steal, or commit adultery. You are probably not the town drunkards. You hold down decent, respectable jobs and provide reasonably well for your families. But, is that all there is to righteousness?

In one of my parishes I took Holy Communion to an elderly shut-in. When I prayed with her the Prayer of General Confession, she protested, "I don't know why we have to pray that prayer; what sins can I commit?" At the time, I had no comeback, but I later realized that her conception of sin was limited to the more obvious transgressions. She didn't realize — and I didn't explain to her — that sin can lodge in our hearts even if we cannot move a muscle. Our sins may be unrighteous thoughts and attitudes.

No Exceptions

That was what Paul had discovered. As it puts it in Romans 3:9-12: "... for I have already charged that all men, both Jews and Greeks, are under the power of sin, as it is written: 'None is righteous, no, not one.'" All of us are sinners no matter how respectable the world may view us. We may not lie, cheat, steal, or commit mayhem, but all of us fail to live up to the best that we know.

William Temple, an Anglican theologian, has written: "Some things hurt us; we hope they will not happen again; we call them bad. Some things please us; we hope they will happen again; we call them good. Our standard of value is the way things affect ourselves. So each of us takes his place in the center of his own world. But I am not the center of the world, or the standard of reference between good and bad. I am not, and God is. In other words, from the beginning I put myself in God's place. This is my original sin."

We may be outstandingly respectable, but we still are not free from the temptation to put ourselves in God's place.

If we do not feel that we are subject to sin, it is probably because, as Thomas D. Bernard put it, "Our sense of sin is in proportion to our nearness to God." The closer we get to God, the more we realize our imperfection and imperfectability.

Obsessed With Salvation

Although in my experience many Christians regard "sin" as an obsolete concept and do not even often mention it, critics of Christianity charge that it is obsessed with sin. But if the gospel is "obsessed" with anything, it is not sin, but salvation. We recognize our sins so that we can get on with salvation — for, as Martin Luther, said, "The recognition of sin is the beginning of salvation."

Grace can only be "amazing" in proportion to our acknowledgment of the awfulness of sin. If we do not take sin seriously enough, neither do we — nor can we — take grace seriously enough. Respectability can be achieved, but salvation cannot. None of us, no matter how righteous, how respectable, can be good enough to earn the saving love of God. That's the earthshaking bad news.

Paul tells the Romans and us that, "since all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God, they are justified by his grace as a gift through the redemption which is in Christ Jesus." (3:23,24). So the love we cannot earn, God always and to everyone offers as an undeserved gift. That is amazing, astounding grace, the universe-shaking good news that frees us from the deadly grasp of our human imperfection.

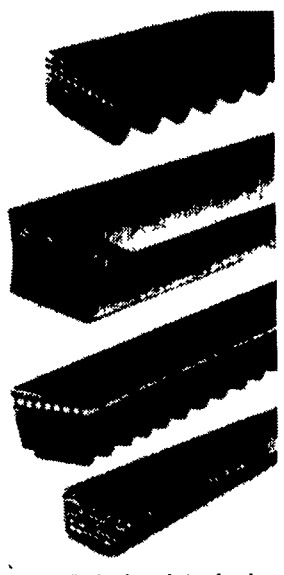
Gates®

Not Just Another Belt!

SUPER HC® AND SUPER HC® MOLDED NOTCH BELTS are designed for use where conventional V-Belt drives are impractical, where space, weight or sheave limitations are present and where increased horsepower capacity and higher speeds are required.



FEATURES:

- Gates "Curves" Concave sides, Radius Relief and Arched Top combine to minimize wear and assure proper support and strength

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
March 1, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Mar. 1. Receipts: 158,200 head, last week 191,400; year ago 180,200. Reported volume included 49 percent weighing over 600 lbs. Compared to last week, feeder steers and heifers over 700 lbs sold 1.00-3.00 lower in slow trading. Calves and stocker cattle were mostly steady with good demand from graze-out wheat and spring grass interests. However, southeastern auctions experienced losses of up to 3.00 on all weights of feeder cattle and calves. Cooler temperatures in the South reduced receipts and made it hard for order buyers to put loads together, also the expected winter weather on the Plains made customers hesitant to receive shipped-in cattle. Pressure on heavyweight feeders was unmistakable near the major feeding areas with ample supplies ready to come off wheat. Despite dry conditions, weight gains have been outstanding as the short wheat had plenty of power. Many of these cattle have yet to be contracted as producers continue to reject lower country bids Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas auctions are expecting big receipts with so many cattle still up for sale.

Current feedlot placements will be based off of June Live Cattle futures, which are nearly 5.00 lower than April. February contracts left the board this week at 70.37, after tendering 777 loads for delivery. Buyers are determined to buy feeders that will hedge for protection amid uncertainty over the Johnson Amendment that would outlaw packer owning, feeding, or controlling livestock any longer than 14 days prior to slaughter. This is the latest of the government's attempts to level the playing field and ensure a future for independent livestock producers, which follows mandatory reporting and country of origin product labeling. The Johnson Amendment appears like a quick fix, on the surface, to the fear of complete consolidation. However, the ramifications of this law are hard to predict and may end up backfiring on producers.

One thing is for sure, a lot of big money will disappear from feeder and stocker cattle markets, as private feeders are not in the habit of buying cattle that are sure to lose money. Packer affiliated feeders have more options and more interested in making sure they have a steady supply of finished livestock. However, many cow/calf producers have already stated that they are willing to give up these record calf prices to ensure a future for them and their families. There is no doubt that if this amendment becomes part of the new Farm Bill it will be a major change to the cattle industry, but the effect on the hog industry will be twice as severe.

The farm uses a combination of bale wagons, ring feeders, and unwrapped bales for supplemental feeding.

"Lanes and fencing are the most important things you can do in grazing," he said. But you only have a 2-3 day "window of opportunity."

And timing the fertilization and "interrelationships with the species your choose" can be critical, Opitz noted.

Opitz noted that producers must be completely committed to using pasture in their operations or it simply won't work. "If you don't want to, don't do it — you'll fail," he said. "If you commit to it and do your homework, it will work."

Some of the challenges Opitz has faced include farming on shallow, shale soils; the labor and mental intensity of managing the grazing operation; seasonal calving program challenges; and working as a partnership.

Opitz noted that he works on the enterprise with the family. He mentioned his son, Mark, and said, "I'm pretty good at buying the cow, and he's pretty good at keeping the wheels on."

Producers who want to adopt grazing can apply it to any size herd. The keys are:

- Ensure the grass is grazed at the correct height, and ensure root reserves are good and maintained until winter dormancy.
- Ensure there is a clover component in the grass mixtures.
- Nitrogen must be applied to the pastures annually, in the late summer or early fall, at minimum. Opitz uses about 40-60 units per acre of mostly urea, along with some ammonium sulfate.

Caring for cattle during times of drought and intense summertime heat is critical. Opitz pointed to a summer day in 1995 when the temperature soared to 107 degrees. The biggest mistake, he said, was placing a water area in the hollow. Though the cows had water, the heat stress was so evident with the settling air and the crowding that "we lost the most milk."

Opitz noted that grass is 85 percent water. A cow's rumen has to be 85 percent water. Many of his cows, coming off pasture in his operation, don't need a drink as they go to milking.

Water is pumped to a 3,000-gallon tank. Flow is 60 gallons per minute.

"Our operation is more like a ranch," he said. "We just have to milk them."

Weed control on pasture includes spot spraying for thistles. "We do very little pasture clipping," he said. He noted for producers who have to do so is admitting they have failed. "We use haying as a form of clipping."

The farm AIs the cows and use cleanup bulls.

Producers need to maintain a commitment to work in pasturing on their feed and health management of the farm.

"Grass is challenging," he said. "Very challenging."

At a recognition banquet Wednesday evening, several producers and agri-industry representatives were recognized.

The PFGC Awards Program was established to recognize individuals in Pennsylvania who have made an outstanding contribution to some aspect of forage and grassland improvement in the state. Awards are made annually when there is a worthy candidate. Presentation of the awards was made Wednesday during the Pennsylvania Forage and Grazing Conference in Grantville. Those who were recognized include:

PFGC Special Award

The Special Award is the highest recognition given by PFGC. It is presented to an individual or company that has made a major contribution directly to the PFGC as well as an outstanding contribution to Pennsylvania's forage and livestock industry and/or conservation farming. The recipients' contribution may have been in production agriculture, industry, research, extension, teaching, or other public service.

Dave Hileman, a dairy farmer from Blair County is this year's recipient of the PFGC Special Award. Hileman has been a very dedicated and strong supporter of the PFGC and its many programs. He served the PFGC as member of the board of directors and in 1996 he was president of the PFGC. Hileman's advice as a farmer and leader was always sought by the board of directors.

An outstanding dairyman, Hileman has made major contributions to the forage and dairy industry in Blair County, in Pennsylvania, and across the country, according to the PFGC. Dave's farming operation includes a milking herd of 420 high-producing Holsteins and 720 crop acres, including 190 acres of alfalfa (all stored as hay crop silage).

His contributions both locally and nationally include the following:

- Past president of Master Farmers Association
- Board of Directors of Hollidaysburg Trust Co.
- President of Genex Cooperative
- Vice president of Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania
- Vice president of Cooperative Resources International
- Member of Sinking Valley Grange, St. John's Lutheran Church of Sinking Valley, and Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders.

Hileman has also received numerous awards for his contribution to Pennsylvania agriculture, including:

- 2001 Outstanding Conservation Farmer of the Year from the Blair County Conservation District.
- 2001 Association Director Award, National Association of Animal Breeders.
- 1985 Master Farmer Award from the Master Farmers Association.

Research/Extension/ Teaching Award

This year's Research/ Extension/Teaching Award recipient is Dr. John Comerford. Comerford has been the extension beef specialist in the Department of Dairy and Animal Science at Penn State since 1987. In the area of research, he has led and collaborated on trials that include the evaluation of forages in the diets of Holstein and beef steers, evaluation of liquid protein feeds with grazing steers, using pasture as a resource for weaning beef calves, evaluation of hay feeding equipment, extensive evaluation of grazing systems for beef cattle in Pennsylvania and the Northeast, and using byproduct feed supplements for grazing heifers.

Comerford's extension programs have focused on profitable management tools for beef production, which have included some 25 invited talks on pasture and forage management. This has included leadership in the implementation of the Blueprint for Success initiative for cattle feeders, the Pennsylvania Feeder Calf Roundup calf marking program, and the Pennsylvania Beef Quality Assurance Program. He serves on the board of directors for the Pennsylvania Cattleman's Association, the Pennsylvania Beef Council, and the Pennsylvania Grazing Land Conservation Initiative.

Comerford serves as vice president of the Northeast Section of the American Society of Animal Science, as a member of the review board for two scientific journals, and as chairman of an ad hoc committee of the Great Lakes Grazing Network charged with the development and production of a national grazing database.

He is also project leader for a Northeast SARE-funded program to train extension agents in Pennsylvania and Maryland in grazing and pasture management. This effort has provided hands-on training for a number of extension professionals from several states.

Forage Conservation Farmer Award

Robert Oswald has been selected to receive the PFGC Conservation Farmer Award this year. Oswald has implemented numerous conservation practices on the 1,500 acres he farms in Northampton County.

The key to his conservation plan is 200 acres of forage. The remainder of his land is divided between beans and corn that are 100 percent no-till. He has installed sod water ways, diversion channels, subsurface drainage, and contour strips to minimize water erosion on his land. In addition to these conservation practices, Oswald installed two waste storage units to handle waste from his 110 dairy animals.

Outstanding Pasture Producer Award

James and Barbara Warburton, Sullivan County

Jim and Barbara Warburton exemplify a commitment to lifelong learning and self improvement on their pasture operation in Sullivan County. Jim has been a sustaining force in the Northeast Grazing Network and has provided direction and encouragement to his fellow graziers to do the same, claiming that there is always something to learn by getting together with counterparts to discuss management. They are initiating discussions in hopes of obtaining a regional Project Grass (pasture and grazing program originally begun in Somerset County) program. The concern shown by the Warburton's for others goes beyond the Grazing network as they are both involved with the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and cooperative extension among other groups, according to PFGC.

from Pa. District 6 — including Berks and Schuylkill counties — was one of 14 House members appointed to the Farm Bill conference committee. The Senate selected seven conferees.

Eckmann said that the AFBF is pushing to have a final bill by the end of March in order for its provisions to go into effect in time for this year's crop season.

"We want a good (Farm Bill) passed as soon as possible," Eckmann said.

AFBF opposes some of the measures in the Senate bill, including commodity payment limits of $275,000 per farm family, and a provision that would shift water regulation authority from states to the federal government.

AFBF wants expanded voluntary conservation incentives to increase cost-sharing option for farmers who implement various conservation measures, according to Eckmann.

Stallman will also likely speak on AFBF's lobby for increasing trade leverage for U.S. farmers, Eckmann said.

AFBF is pushing for trade promotion authority for the president, seeking to reduce trade tariffs on ag commodities and reduce disparities in domestic support spending between the U.S. and other countries.

The fact that U.S. domestic support for farmers is low in comparison with that of other countries, such as those in the European Union, creates a trade disadvantage for U.S. farmers, according to Eckmann.

"We can produce and sell, but we can't compete against foreign treasuries," he said.

In a recent statement, Stallman highlighted additional AFBF priorities for the Farm Bill. They include:

• Adoption of House provisions on fixed decoupled payments, loan rates, counter-

Gross Domestic Product
'Not Gross'

• The economy grew 1.4 percent the last quarter of 2001.
• GDP is the output of goods and services.
• Personal consumption expenditures up 0.4 percent in January.
• USDA announces February 2002 class prices.

The U.S. Department of Commerce released the "Real Gross Domestic Product" calculation for the fourth quarter of 2001. This estimate reflects the output of goods and services for the entire U.S. economy. If it's negative, we are in a recession. If it's positive, it reflects economic growth.

The number released for the last quarter of 2001 was up 1.4 percent on an annual basis.

This is actually good news. Most analysts were very pleased that the number wasn't negative, a sign that we were still in a recession. In fact, more good news about the economy is flowing in. Last week the Commerce Department also released a report on consumer spending, which was up 0.4 percent in January. Consumers are showing confidence in the economy, and are keeping things chugging along.

Even Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve, appeared confident about the economy as he spoke to Congress recently. His comments suggest we have already pulled out of a very mild recession and are on track to a recovery.

All of this is vitally important to dairy farmers. A healthy economy means lots of busy workers eating lunch at fast food places, and taking their families out for pizza. This increases the demand for dairy products, especially cheese, and firms up the price of milk. Cheese buyers are always willing to bid up dairy commodity prices if there is strong demand in the marketplace. Thus there is a direct relationship between consumer spending on dairy products and the farm-gate price of milk.

USDA released the class and component prices for February 2002 recently. These component prices, announced March 1, 2002, will show up in producers' milk checks by March 17.

The component prices for February 2002 are as follows: butterfat $1.3817, protein $2.0884, and other solids $0.0965. These were based on the following dairy commodity prices: butter $1.2480, nonfat dry milk $0.9121, cheese $1.2895, and dry whey $0.2334, all in dollars per pound.

These component prices were then used to produce the following federal order class prices for February 2002: Class II $12.28, Class III $11.63, and Class IV $11.54, all in dollars per CWT. The federal order class prices represent the following changes from the month before: Class II -$0.41, Class III -$0.24, and Class IV -$0.39, all in dollars per CWT.

Note: the headline used above should be attributed to an unnamed media source I heard on the radio. I wasn't that inventive to dream this one up!

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Nutrient Management Board

said that the SCC will reconsider importer regulations.

"We need to go back and thoroughly re-evalaute what we proposed," he said.

Another revision would require NMPs to include verification that a current conservation plan is in place for lands covered in the NMP.

Donald Robinson, Lancaster County Conservation District administrator, urged Pennsylvania ag agencies and agribusinesses to encourage conservation plans on farms. He also cautioned against nutrient management laws overstepping their bounds into conservation planning.

Robinson and others agents pointed out the difficulties that already exist in enforcing conservation measures.

"Don't use nutrient management plans to enforce conservation plans," Robinson said.

Goodlander said that the current Nutrient Management Act already requires NMPs be "consistent" with conservation plans. Reducing soil erosion through sound conservation practices is also crucial to managing nutrient runoff, he noted.

"This is a key element to address phosphorus loss," he said.

Jennifer Weld, soil scientist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service, updated the board on the development of the phosphorus site index — or P-index — a tool for determining potential phosphorus runoff.

Researchers and planners are "fairly close to producing a useable draft" of a two-part P-index for nutrient management purposes, Weld said.

Requiring the P-index in nutrient management planning is one of the major changes the SCC has proposed for the new Pa. Nutrient Management Act.

Part A of the P-index would determine distance from a stream and the amount of phosphorus in the soil for land in the NMP.

Land closer than 150 feet to a stream or with a soil test of greater than 200 parts per million (ppm) of available phosphorus would then be required to apply Part B of the index.

According to the Penn State Agronomy Guide, available phosphorus levels of 30 to 50 ppm are needed for normal agronomic crop production, Goodlander said.

Part B of the P-index takes into account more comprehensive factors related to phosphorus loss such as erosion and manure and fertilizer applications, according to Weld.

The shift toward phosphorus-based nutrient management has come in large part because of research showing that some of the phosphorus found in soils is water-soluble, potentially affecting water quality more quickly than insoluble phosphorus.

Other concerns regarded a proposal that would require soil test information for the three major nutrients and lime in NMPs, phosphorus management in pastures, and the definition of various terms in the new regulations.

Goodlander acknowledged the difficulties involved in striking a balance between effective nutrient management and cumbersome regulations.

"We need to make sure that as we evolve into the next phase of the program, we don't knock people out of compliance," he said.

The Nutrient Management Advisory Board scheduled another meeting for April 2 from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture Building in Harrisburg.

Remaining agenda items include CAO determination, manure application and storage issues, funding issues, irrigation plans, map requirements, and animal access to streams.

The NMAB consists of four advisers and 15 voting members representing various facets of production agriculture, agribusiness, the environment, the public, and government agencies.

cyclical programs and payment limits.

• Support for a Senate provision that allows farmers the option of updating their yield for farm program purposes.

• Support for expansion of a conservation incentive package as provided in the Conservation Security Act contained in the Senate farm bill.

• Adoption of the House environmental conservation acreage reserve program (ECARP) and environmental quality incentive program (EQIP) modifications, which include a 50/50 split of EQIP funds for crops and livestock.

"Farm Bureau has views on many of the provisions in the two bills," Stallman said. "However, we have prioritized (those points) as most important for inclusion in the final conference report."

Stallman is scheduled to speak March 16 at the Twin Lakes Country Club, Allentown, at 6:45 p.m.

The event is hosted by the Bucks, Lehigh, and Northampton/Monroe county Farm Bureaus.

The big flaw in the legislation is the fact that revenues paid to the dairy farmers will come from the U.S. Treasury instead of the marketplace where it should come from.

Leahy's original dairy plan called for establishing higher Class I prices with national pooling of the premium money. Unfortunately, only about 43 or 44 senators agreed to Leahy's original proposal. Consequently, the proposal had to be withdrawn. The proposal had the support of several Republican senators, including Pennsylvania's Arlen Specter.

Please remember at the same time of Leahy's proposal, the Republican leadership of the Senate was proposing their version of a Farm Bill which was not geared to address the inequities facing dairy farmers. Consequently, in order to have any dairy provisions in the Farm Bill, Leahy and his supporters had to go to the present proposed dairy legislation in the Farm Bill.

The nine Republican senators, along with the 48 Democrats, should be commended for their vote on the Farm Bill. We should not forget Sen. Jim Jeffords (I-Vt.) who voted, as usual, for the dairy farmers.

The dairy farmers in the other 36 continental states will receive different payments as the value of manufactured milk decreases.

It's hard to understand why U.S. senators will support taking revenues from the U.S. Treasury instead of allowing the revenues from the right place, the marketplace.

Northeastern dairy farmers must remember the premium money only involves the Class I price, not the other classes of milk.

Consequently, all classes of milk will still be allowed to continue their common roller coaster ride, which in most cases is harmful to the dairy farmers.

These roller coaster prices will also continue in the marketplace. Consumers will continue to see the dramatic swing in the retail price of fluid milk and milk products.

Remember dairy farmers will be paid the premium price only on about 45 percent of their milk. Fifty-five percent of their milk will not carry any premiums.

Those who appear to rejoice over the extra money for milk coming from the taxpayers instead of the marketplace should take a hard look at Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) has established a $1.65 per hundredweight premium on Class I milk (fluid) which results in a 14.3 cents per gallon higher price for Pennsylvania. If this can be done in Pennsylvania, then why can't it be done on a national level?

The dairy farmers will accept their new kind of milk checks, but they certainly will wonder if this is the beginning of the dairy farmers having fingers pointed at them the same way fingers are pointed at grain farmers.

Schellenger Named Trust Director

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Board of Trustees of Lancaster Farmland Trust has appointed Heidi J. Schellenger as executive director.

"Heidi has been with the Trust for four years, serving as the director of land preservation for the past two years," said Lee Dmitzak, chair. "During that time she gained extensive experience assisting farmers with the easement process, she assisted with grant writing and fundraising campaigns, and managed several personnel hires. The board feels she represents the right mix of skills to meet the challenges the Trust faces as we strive to preserve the most productive, nonirrigated land in the United States."

Lancaster Farmland Trust preserved a record 23 farms last year, and Schellenger hopes to continue the Trust's successes by having another record-breaking year in 2002.

After earning a bachelor's degree in civil engineering from the Worcester Polytechnic Institute in 1992, Schellenger served as an urban planning engineer in the U.S. Peace Corps. She also completed the Lancaster County Master Planner Course, which dealt with transfer of development rights. She is also a member of the Smart Growth Committee and the Lancaster-York Agri-Tourism Initiative Committee.

Holstein Sale, Convention At New Altoona Convention Center

The top bid went to a Holstein owned by Tyler Peachey of Petersburg in Huntingdon County. The cow, Tory, sold for $36,000 to Paul Neer, also of Huntingdon County.

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — "It wasn't a record, but it was a good price," said Ken Raney, executive director of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, of the $36,000 bid on the top Holstein at the convention sale Friday evening, March 1.

Tory, the $36,000 Holstein, is a 2½-year-old owned by Tim Peachey's Laurel Run Farms in McAlevy's Fort, Huntingdon County. She was bought by Paul Neer of Belleville. A hoof trimmer by trade, Neer knew she was an outstanding cow with a great true breeding potential. While he had hoped to take her home for a $25,000 check, he got carried away with the bidding paying the top price at the evening's auction.

According to Raney, there were 86 lots of Holsteins sold at the Friday evening sale with the unofficial average being $3,366.

"The state convention is held in the central district once every six years," he points out. "This year, Altoona got the vote. The new convention center was a great spot."

While it was the first time an animal event had been held in the new center, everything went well. Pillars and the floor were covered with plastic and there was plenty of sawdust to absorb odors.

There was plenty of room for displays from various farm marketers and hotels nearby provided ample housing.

Among the honored guests was Sam Hayes, Pennsylvania's secretary of agriculture.

The event opened on Thursday, Feb. 28 and concluded on Saturday morning.

Holstein breeders in the central district include those from Bedford, Blair, Centre, Clinton, Huntingdon, Juniata, Lycoming, Mifflin, Montour, Northumberland, Snyder, and Union counties.

Saturday morning's award banquet included Matthew Lohr as the speaker and Kendy Gable of New Enterprise singing the National Anthem.

Co-chairmen were Judy Black and John Burket.

Atlantic City, New Jersey, June 24-June 27, 2002

RINGOES, N.J. — The New Jersey Holstein-Friesian Association (NJH-FA) will host the National Holstein Convention in Atlantic City June 23-27 at the Taj Mahal Hotel and Casino.

"We're on course and doing very well," national convention chairman Joe Valen, Somerset, N.J., told Lancaster Farming.

Valen provided updates from all planning committee activities late in January this year at the NJH-FA meeting attended by more than 50 members, families, and friends at the Amwell Valley Fire House in Ringoes, N J

Valen reminded those who want to attend that registration deadline is May 15.

Said Valen, "The National Holstein Convention will provide a unique opportunity for agribusiness representatives to gather with Holstein breeders from around the country in Atlantic City. More than 3,000 are expected to attend this exciting event."

The host association has picked the theme, "New Jersey and You in 2002," adopted from the state's popular tourist slogan, to emphasize the importance of N.J. to the U.S. food-producing industry.

Following are schedules and sign-up forms.

Penn State Cooperative Extension Capitol Region Dairy Team

THE POWER OF ONE MORE LACTATION

Glenn A. Shirk
Extension Dairy Agent
Lancaster

Herd replacements are a major cost of producing milk, and the first nickel of profit a cow makes in her lifetime does not start until after she has recovered all the cost associated with getting her to age at first calving.

The amount of time needed for her to break even in her lifetime will vary depending primarily upon milk prices, replacement costs, and other production costs. It can be one to three lactations.

Once a cow recovers her replacement cost, she enters what I call the "profit zone." The important question is: do you give her enough time in the profit zone to make a nice lifetime profit to return back to you, or do you cull her shortly after she enters the profit zone?

If your cull rate is 33 percent, and it takes a cow two years to break even, that means she has only one profitable lactation in her lifetime — much less if it approaches 40 percent! If cull rates can be dropped, in this example, from 33 percent down to 25 percent, that gives her one more profitable lactation in her lifetime — twice as much as before! If you can do that for the entire herd, herd profits could double. That's something to ponder over. That's the power of one more lactation.

Also, when culling rates are high, cows don't even have the opportunity to mature enough to reach the most productive and most profitable years of their lives, which is a waste of good genetics. So, if the cow turnover rate in your herd is high, it may be time to ask: what's causing them to leave? If you are merchandising a lot of cows for a good price, or if you are upgrading the herd by weeding out inferior genetics, that's a good reason and a good management practice. If problems and injuries are forcing you to remove cows, especially some of your good genetic stock at slaughter prices, that's a problem that deserves serious attention. If necessary, seek assistance from respected advisers, consultants, and service people.

How many years does it take for your cows to break even? The following calculations are rather simple and can give you a rough idea. When done, compare lifetime profit after three years in milk with profit after four years in milk.

Compare profit after four years in milk (25 percent cull rate) with profit after three years in milk (33 percent cull rate). To evaluate the impact of a $2-$3 change in milk price, multiply the CWTs of milk shipped by the change in milk price. Then, adjust the figure in item 6 by this amount, and recalculate the results.

Step 1. Estimate herd replacement costs:
1. Number of cows (milking and dry)		_____
2. Cow turnover rate or cull rate	x	_____
3. Replacements needed per year	=	_____
4. Full cost of a replacement	x	_____
5. Total replacement cost per year	=	_____
Step 2. Estimate profit per cow before replacement costs:
6. Total dairy-related income for the farm		_____
7. Dairy-related expenses for the farm	-	_____
8. Make any necessary accrual adjustments	+ -	_____
9. Adjusted farm dairy profits per year	=	_____
10. Total replacement cost per year (item 5)	+	_____
11. Farm dairy profits without replacements	=	_____
12. Number of cows (item 1)	/	_____
13. Profit per cow without replacements	=	_____
Step 3. Estimate cows' cumulative lifetime profits:
14. Full cost of a replacement (item 4). Enter this as a negative figure because cows start their1st lactation with this negative balance.		-_____
15. 0.80 times the profit per cow in item 13	+	_____
16. Lifetime profit after 1 year in milk	=	_____
17. 1.00 times the profit per cow in item 13	+	_____
18. Lifetime profit after 2 years in milk	=	_____
19. 1.05 times the profit per cow in item 13	+	_____
20. Lifetime profit after 3 years in milk	=	_____
21. 1.10 times the profit per cow in item 13	+	_____
22. Lifetime profit after 4 years in milk	=	_____

March 15 Is Crop Insurance Deadline

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Farmers preparing for spring planting in drought-stressed areas of Pennsylvania should pay attention to the rapidly approaching deadline of a crop insurance program sponsored by USDA.

Pennsylvania agricultural producers have a special need for crop insurance this growing season, said Jayson Harper, professor of agricultural economics and farm management specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"We're certainly 'looking down the barrel' of a drought this year, with the drought emergency that's going on in southeastern Pennsylvania in particular," Harper said. "The cost of crop insurance has come down a lot from just two years ago, so it's much more affordable. The commonwealth of Pennsylvania has gotten behind the crop insurance program, providing additional subsidies. So some levels of crop insurances cost about half of what they did two years ago, and farmers can get the lowest level of coverage for free."

The USDA's Risk Management Agency sets March 15 as the last day for Pennsylvania farmers to purchase crop insurance for spring plantings of corn, barley, forage, grain sorghum, green peas, tobacco, oats, potatoes, processing beans, soybeans, sweet corn, tomatoes and winter squash.

Pa. Recognizes Weights And Measures Anniversary

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In recognition of the important service performed by 100 Weights and Measures officials across Pennsylvania, Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced that Pennsylvania is recognizing the 203rd anniversary of the signing of the first Weights and Measures law in the U.S. on March 2, 1799.

"In Pennsylvania, you get what you pay for," Hayes said. "From March 1-7, we are recognizing the Weights and Measures officials who protect consumers by ensuring they get accurate quantity information when purchasing products."

Hayes said this year's celebration theme, "Meeting Consumers' Needs Through Weights and Measures," symbolizes the two hallmarks of the Weights and Measures profession: measurement and service. He added that the theme also reminds businesses of the dual responsibility they have in providing not only accurate weights and measures, but also high-quality service to customers.

Besides scales and gas pumps, many other types of devices are tested by Weights and Measures officials. Such devices include meters used to measure home fuel-oil deliveries, milk meters, wire- and cordage-measuring devices, taxi meters, parking meters, highway truck scales, and fabric-measuring instruments.

Weights and Measures officials also have the important job of checking packaged products to make sure they contain the quantity stated on the label. Officials take random samples of packages in stores and count the items in the package, or weigh or measure the contents to see if the labeled quantity is accurate. They also check to be certain the price charged the consumer at the store checkout stand is the same as the advertised price.

Responding to consumer or business complaints is also a service provided by Weights and Measures officials. If a consumer thinks that a retailer is not providing accurate and adequate quantity information to make a value comparison, or the weight or measure of any product you purchase is incorrect, the consumer should first try to resolve the problem with the seller. If a satisfactory agreement is not reached, the consumer can then contact the state Weights and Measures office at (717) 787-9089.

Holstein Association Conducts Meeting, Gives Awards During Convention

Dean Johnson, Warren, now completing his term as president, was honored for his role as president and for serving the association for more than 20 years. He is pictured with his wife Melinda.

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — As part of the "Expanding Your View in 2002" Pennsylvania Holstein Convention, members gathered for the 89th annual meeting at the Blair County Convention Center late last week.

Rick Allen gave the treasurer's report, highlighting that the long-term debt shows a dramatic reduction.

Junior Holstein Association member and speech contest winner Rachel Bachman, Ulysses, brought a courtroom scene into the meeting with her "Defending the Honest Cow" presentation. Rachel represented her client, an animal discriminated against by unethical practices in the show ring. The honest animals are at a disadvantage, she said. Even the animals that have not received illegal treatments may be questioned.

Unethical practices such as illegal drugs, udder irritants, stimulants or depressants, surgery, or steroids, she said, need to be addressed. Breed associations and show rings committee members must enforce the show ring code of ethics.

"The show ring is not a hopeless cause and dishonesty does not have to reign," she said, citing the example of changed rules in horseracing and the Canadian dairy show.

Ken Raney, executive director, also gave a report. Raney is enthusiastic about the improved financial situation of the organization.

"We feel that we have turned the corner in the past year, year and a half," he said. Raney noted the increased use of the Middletown facility for quarantined heifers along with successful consignment sales.

The organization has also been active in quarantining and exporting cattle. About 2,700 head of cattle were put through the farm bound for other countries.

There has also been renewed interest in Pennsylvania Holstein Association member's cattle for sale, said Raney. He encouraged attendees to spread the word about the cattle sold by association members, "who continue to be a supplier of top genetics," he said.

Additionally a Website has been developed for the Holstein Association. A current listing of sales, member communication items, news, events, and junior association information is posted at www.paholsteins.com.

"We also continue to encourage local clubs to offer programs and activities," he said. On the junior association front, there are 2,000 junior members on the list, he said, with 500 active members.

Raney recognized Dean Johnson, Warren, who is completing his term as president. Johnson has served the organization in various capacities for more than 20 years.

During his speech Johnson summed up his years in office in addition to his years in county and state leadership. Johnson compared today's prevailing attitude and leadership to when he first began serving in the organization. Out of turmoil came positive change, he said.

One change was a split junior and senior conventions, which began in 1989. The split, although controversial, was "when the youth program began to blossom," he said.

He also noted that the Holstein Association is addressing the show ring ethics issue, conducting committee meetings in January and February. With the new administration, "good things will happen with good communications, trust, and respect," he said.

John Burket, East Freedom, has taken the role of president of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

John M. Meyer, president of the national Holstein Association, Brattleboro, Vt, spoke during the afternoon session of the meeting.

Meyer said that he was privileged to be speaking in Pennsylvania, where so many outstanding leaders of the Holstein organizations have come from.

He noted that the organization has seen a growth of 39 percent in the past year, "a barometer of what people really think" about the association.

Other Friday activities included a ladies day program and luncheon, a pre-sale hot buffet, and convention sale.

Also during the convention the Pennsylvania Holstein Association recognized 68 Pennsylvania Holstein breeders who received the Progressive Genetics Herd Award.

The requirements for the Progressive Genetic Herd Award are:

- Herd owner must be a member of both national and state associations, and enrolled in the Deluxe or Premier TriStar service options and Herd Classification programs. If enrolled in the Deluxe option, you must purchase the Genetic Herd and Youngstock Reports.
- Minimum of 20 87 percent RHA and higher cows in the milking herd with CTPI. No minimum requirement for number of young stock.
- Awarded to the 500 herds with the highest average TPI of all females in the herd, both young and mature. Animals used in the evaluation are derived from February Genetic Herd Report and Youngstock Genetic Herd Report inventories.

Membership

The Pennsylvania Holstein Association recognized their membership solicitors at their Awards Program at their annual convention at the Ramada Inn, Altoona.

The efforts of all the membership solicitors around the state is tremendous. A lot of time was put forth and all solicitors put in effort, but special recognition goes to the following individuals who have done outstanding work in membership solicitation: Renee Bates, Mercer County; Paul Hartle, Centre County; Willard Hitchcock, Warren County; Jay Houser, Centre County; James Houser, Centre County; and Connie Troutman, Berks County.

There are seven clubs that have already reached their membership goal for 2002: Cambria, Centre/Clinton, Clearfield, Dauphn, McKean, Mercer and Warren Counties will all receive a $200 cash award for their efforts.

Breeder Awards

Fifty-six Pennsylvania Holstein members were honored with the prestigious Progressive Breeder Registry Award at the 2002 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention at the Ramada Inn, Altoona. The requirements for the award include:

• Herd owner must be a member of both national and state associations, and enrolled in the Deluxe or Premier TriStar service options and Herd Classification programs.

• Percent B.A.A. for Herd Classification conducted during the time period of September 1999 through February 2001 exceeding the national requirement of 104.2 percent. If you classified more than once during this time period, both BAAs will be evaluated.

• Minimum of 20 87 percent RHA and higher cows in the milking herd of which at least 75 percent bear the herd owner's prefix.

• Adjusted M.E. Lactation Average exceeding the national cutoffs of 24,553 pounds of milk and 1,644 pounds of combined fat and protein. All herd lactation averages are standardized by each state's average production. This is done by multiplying your official M.E. Lactation Average for milk, fat, and protein by state adjustment factors. This results in an Adjusted M.E. Lactation Average, which is used in the PBR evaluation.

Keystone Farms, Easton received the award for the 44th time this year, while seven breeders received the award for the first time.

Progressive Breeder Award winners:

• 44 years: Keystone Farm, Easton;

• 30 years: Jay and Mary Houser, Spring Mills;

Vaccines Topic Of Herd Health Seminars Conducted This Week

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — For dairy and beef producers alike, Neospora, although a new disease, is increasing in importance as it moves east from California.

At a seminar conducted at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center Tuesday, New Franklin Ruritan Community Center on Wednesday, and the Lebanon Ag Center on Thursday, herd health — specifically vaccines — was in the spotlight

Presenters Dr. Les Choromanski, Neospora manager for Intervet Inc., and Dr. Arlen Mills, Penn State extension veterinarian, shared their knowledge and experience about herd health.

Neospora

Choromanski has spent the past seven years researching Neospora and developing a vaccine for the parasite.

It was first identified in 1988 as Neospora Caninum — a cause of abortions in dogs. Researchers recognized the disease as a major cause of abortions in California's dairy cattle in 1991. The parasite is blamed for 40,000 cattle abortions each year in California. In addition to abortions, the disease causes a drop in milk production of more than two pounds a day.

By 1998 they had identified dogs as a definitive host of the disease, as the eggs of the disease, oocysts, can be produced and passed through a dog's intestinal system.

Also in 1998 the USDA granted conditional license to a vaccine, "Neoguard," which became a full license in November 2001.

"The infection of Neospora is for life," said Choromanski. Although infection can be horizontal (from dog to cow), or vertical (from cow to calf), an infected cow can produce a healthy calf. On the other hand, the fetus can be aborted at any stage of gestation. Cattle do not spread neosporosis horizontally to each other.

Choromanski recommends using a vaccine in the first trimester of gestation followed by a second dose 3-4 weeks later.

Producers should use the vaccine "if you have unacceptable — more than five percent — levels of abortion and have animals that have tested positive for Neospora," he said. However "even the best vaccine can fail" in a poorly-managed, virus-infested environment.

One biosecurity measure is to ensure that dogs are not allowed to feed on aborted fetuses or placentas.

Parasites, as a whole, said Choromanski, have an adverse effect on the immune system in his lectures.

"Parasites in cattle can . . . more than just nip at the producer's food dollar," he said.

According to Choromanski, a moderate to heavy load of parasites can interfere with the immune system's response.

"The biggest mistake you can make is applying dewormers at your convenience, not by the label," he said. For the Pennsylvania region, he said, spring and fall seem to be optimal for vaccination.

For cows with a high parasitic contamination level, he recommended treating them to remove parasites to begin the vaccination program. They should be treated again at freshening and again 6-8 weeks later.

Moderately contaminated cows should be treated at freshening and 6-8 weeks later. Cows with low levels of contamination should be treated once a year at freshening.

In summary, "the keys to an effective vaccination program are good nutrition and a good parasite control program," he said.

$20-200 per head. Clinical signs, including diarrhea, anemia, rough coats, and bottle-jaw, are "just the tip of the iceburg" in comparison to the increase in disease susceptibility, increased time to breeding, more days to market, and drop in milk production that occur as subclinical signs.

Not A Silver Bullet

Vaccination, while an important management tool, is not a silver bullet, said Arlen Mills. "But done properly, it will provide a great return on investment. However, it's only one part of a management system," he said. "Poor management can defeat the best immunology."

Mills reviewed the several types of vaccines, which include killed and modified live (MLV) vaccines. The killed vaccine needs multiple doses to provide a benefit, as the first dose primes the animal's system while the second stimulates cells to produce antibodies.

The MLV requires one dose to stimulate cells and tends to be less expensive, however it must be handled carefully, as disinfectant, sunlight, or temperature extremes will kill its effectiveness.

As for timing, "the general rule of thumb is, don't vaccinate calves within the first month," he said, as colostrum will naturally provide the necessary antibodies.

Stress, such as freshening, weather, or environment changes, can depress an animal's response to vaccine.

Mills also pointed out that to get the best response, animals must have optimal nutrition.

Although vaccination programs are not the same from one farm to the next, Mills did have some suggestions to protect against basic diseases. His recommendations included vaccinating against:

• Infectious Bovine Rhinotracheitis (IBR). This virus affects the respiratory system and can cause abortion storms.

• Parainfluenza 3 (PI3). A relatively mild infection that affects the respiratory system, PI3 gives bacteria time to move in.

• Bovine Respiratory Syncitial (BRSV). A virus, this respiratory bug is often triggered by acidosis.

• Bovine Virus Diarrhea (BVD). This affects the animal's respiratory, reproductive, and digestive tracts, besides impairing the immune system.

• Leptospirosis. "Lepto" is a bacteria that affects the animals' kidneys and may even cause kidney failure in fetuses, which results in abortion at 6-9 months. The sources may be water and rodents.

Dairy heifers should be vaccinated for all five at 4-6 months of age. The same vaccination program should be repeated in 3-4 weeks after the first administration and repeated prebreeding.

A vaccination program for cows "is much more flexible if the young stock are vaccinated correctly," he said.

Producers should vaccinate cows once or twice a year when the cows are dry.

"Do something that will get done. If it's a fancy plan, so fancy it won't get done, it's not much use," he said.

Berks/Southeast Cattlemen's Association Presents Beef Ed Evening

DEANNA CUNFER
Carbon Co. Correspondent

BERNVILLE (Berks Co.) — The Berks/Southeast Cattlemen's Association in conjunction with Penn State Cooperative Extension recently presented their annual beef education evening at the Bernville Grange.

After the family style dinner featuring beef as the main course, Berks County Extension Agent Clyde Myers welcomed those present and invited all to visit the informational displays by the program sponsors.

Each year the Berks/Southeast Cattlemen's Association recognizes the youth beef champions from surrounding counties. Those present this year were Kristi Dietrich, 17, daughter of Jim and Donna Dietrich of Hamburg and Justin Cunfer, 17, son of Dennis and Deanna Cunfer of Lehighton.

Dietrich, a junior at Tulpehocken High School, represented Berks County where she received the grand champion market steer project honors. Dietrich, a 4-H and FFA member, raises and breeds registered and crossbred Limousin cattle. Her future plans include pursuing a degree in animal science or business management.

Cunfer, a senior at Lehighton High School, raises and breeds registered and crossbred Angus cattle. His bred and owned market steer received grand champion honors at the Carbon County Fair. A 4-H member, Cunfer will be attending Penn State University Park campus this fall pursuing a degree in animal science with a career goal of becoming a veterinarian specializing in large animals — particularly beef cattle.

Association President Robert Adam explained that the two objectives of the association are to promote beef and to promote the youth of the beef industry. Currently there are 41 families and 17 junior members in the association. A few of the major functions of the association are the annual beef education evening, a summer field trip, summer picnic and pasture walk, annual banquet with entertainment and a display at the Berks County Ag Center's open house.

Upcoming events are a beef short course in March and an "On Rail On Hoof" evaluation scheduled for April. The group also sponsors members each year for a weekend of educational events as well as sponsoring trophies and the guests at the evening's meeting.

Paul Slayton, executive director of the PA Beef Council (PBC), then presented his program to share with beef groups what is done with their check-off dollars. He also went over the yearly functions of the PBC as promotional events putting the check-off money to use.

The PBC is dedicated to serve the dairy, beef and veal producers of the state through research, education, promotion and marketing management.

An interesting fact presented by Slayton was that the PBC handles check-off dollars from 30 to 35 states for cattle originating in other states and entering Pennsylvania for various purposes.

Dr. William Henning, Penn State extension meat specialist, presented his program titled "Producing Beef for Today's Market" touching on various marketing approaches geared towards both the small and large producers as well as what is preferred by both small and large packers.

Henning, who works in the meats area at Penn State University, works closely with packers and processors. He presented variables such as weight, finish, genetics, sex and quality of animal and carcass that will affect how readily your animals will be accepted by packers and processors. He also presented various methods of marketing your product and the criteria needed to be considered while you search for the best avenue for our operation.

Public Perceptions Force Changes In Legislation, Poultry Industry

by which standards were judged. Today unfair perceptions by consumers and other countries are causing havoc. Complaints about chemicals, odors, hormones, and the methods of raising chickens haunt the industry.

Martin said that when he worked in Illinois, a bill was introduced to the ag senate that shook up the industry. The Animal Liberation Front (ALF) introduced a bill to put a ban on molting of chickens and the use of cages claiming that these practices were a leading source of salmonella-caused illnesses in people. ALF claimed 4,000,000 illnesses resulting in 1,000 deaths were related to salmonella enteridis (se).

If the bill had passed, ALF would have had permission to take over farms, confiscate equipment, and collect damages and penalties.

Fortunately, the bill did not pass. But Martin said, ALF selected Illinois because it is not a large poultry production state. ALF thought they could slide the legislation through and then tackle other states.

"They use junk science. They take information and turn it around to suit their needs," Martin said of the ALF and other groups.

In this case, the figures ALF used were no where near the statistics which show that only 1,180 se illnesses were reported in 1999 and no one died. In most cases these illnesses were attributed to improper cooking and handling and had nothing to do with the way poultry was produced.

Public perceptions put increased regulatory burdens on the industry. It's difficult to educate the public about what the poultry does and why they do it.

Jennifer Weld, who is with a research agency of the USDA, explained how phosphorous research is being conducted and the impact it has on the environment. The need for a balance between phosphorous and nitrogen is difficult in manure management. But the emphasis is shifting away from nitrogen to phosphorous in management practices. New legislation at both the federal and state level concerning phosphorous is being redefined. Open meetings will be conducted by the Nutrient Management Advisory Board, and producers comments are desired. Weld said she welcomes phone calls in order to help producers and the industry. Contact her at (814) 863-0946.

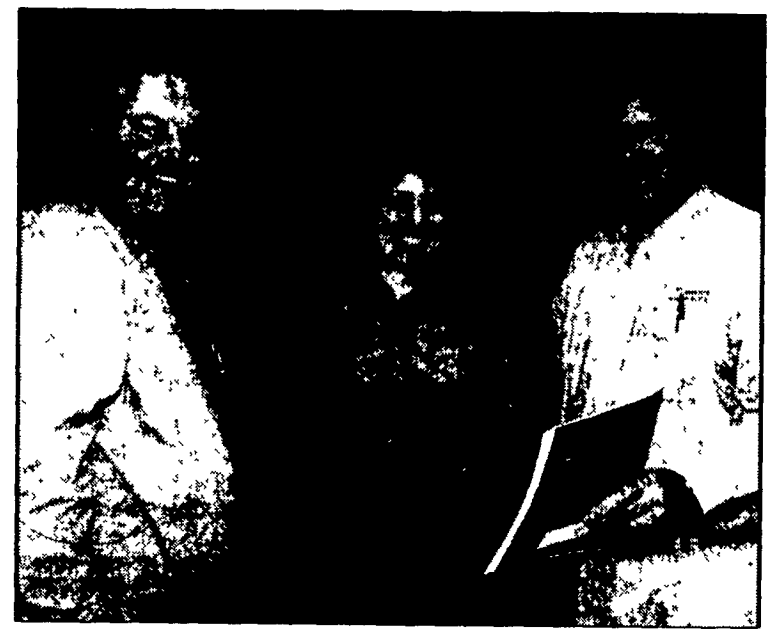
An update on Avian Influenza in the state was presented by Dr. Patty Dunn, veterinarian; Jim Adams, Wenger's Feed Mill; and Dr. David Hensler, PDA.

The latest research findings in manure additives and treatments was addressed by Dr. Bud Malone. He said that recent lawsuits on emission and odor cases will influence how the industry needs to treat manure.

Dr. Jim Arends, who works in biotechnology in the Carolinas, explained different methods for managing beetles and flies in poultry houses. Research in this area also in being influence by perceptional issues. "If a consumer perceives a problem that isn't there, it forces changes in the industry," Arends said.

To protect farms from fringe groups, producers are urged to burglar proof their farm or plant and to keep abreast with the news and legislation.

Other speakers for the day included Mike Good, Tyson Foods; Dr. Eric Gingrich, University of Pennsylvania, who gave an update on focal duodenal necrosis.



Andy Bradford, president of the Lancaster County Poultry Association; Jennifer Weld, Ag Research Service; and Dr. Gregory Martin, extension poultry specialist, discuss the agenda for Poultry Progress Day, conducted Thursday at the Farm and Home Center.

Cattlemen's Association Beef Ed Evening

Ending the evening was Dr. Sam Comstock, University of Vermont livestock extension specialist, accompanied by Vermont beef producers Dick Delfavero and Guy Crosby. In a preview of the program presented the next day at the Lancaster Cattlemen's meeting Comstock explained the similarities and differences between raising beef in Pennsylvania and Vermont.

The three stressed the fact that Vermont has mostly all small producers who must come together and work together in order to promote and market their product.

Delfavero and Crosby described their operations and involvement in various programs that they participate in with the University of Vermont and Cornell University.

Of particular interest was the retained ownership program both producers are currently participating in where cattle from various Vermont producers are currently in a feedlot here in Lancaster County.

Preconditioning methods, genetics and health issues are being monitored closely as they track the performance of the cattle from the various farms for comparison and suggestions for changes to be made in hopes of continuing the program next year.

Holstein Association Releases Auction Report

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — On Saturday, March 1, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association concluded the 89th Pennsylvania Holstein Convention with the annual awards breakfast, which featured two fund-raising auctions.

The first annual Junior Labor Auction sold eight lots of Junior Executive Committee members who were willing to spend a day of their time volunteering. The volunteer tasks ranged from maid service to fieldwork to washing a string of show cattle. Thanks to the generosity of many adult members, the Junior Labor Auction raised nearly $700 for the Junior Association.

Additionally, the banquet featured a Special Items Auction. County Holstein clubs in the central host district donated various items to be auctioned off for the junior benefit. The top sale was a handmade quilt, donated by the Blair County Holstein Club. Judy Black, this year's convention co-chair, purchased it for $1,075. Collectively, the 23 donated items raised about $4,000 for the Junior Association.

Invitation To An Early Spring

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

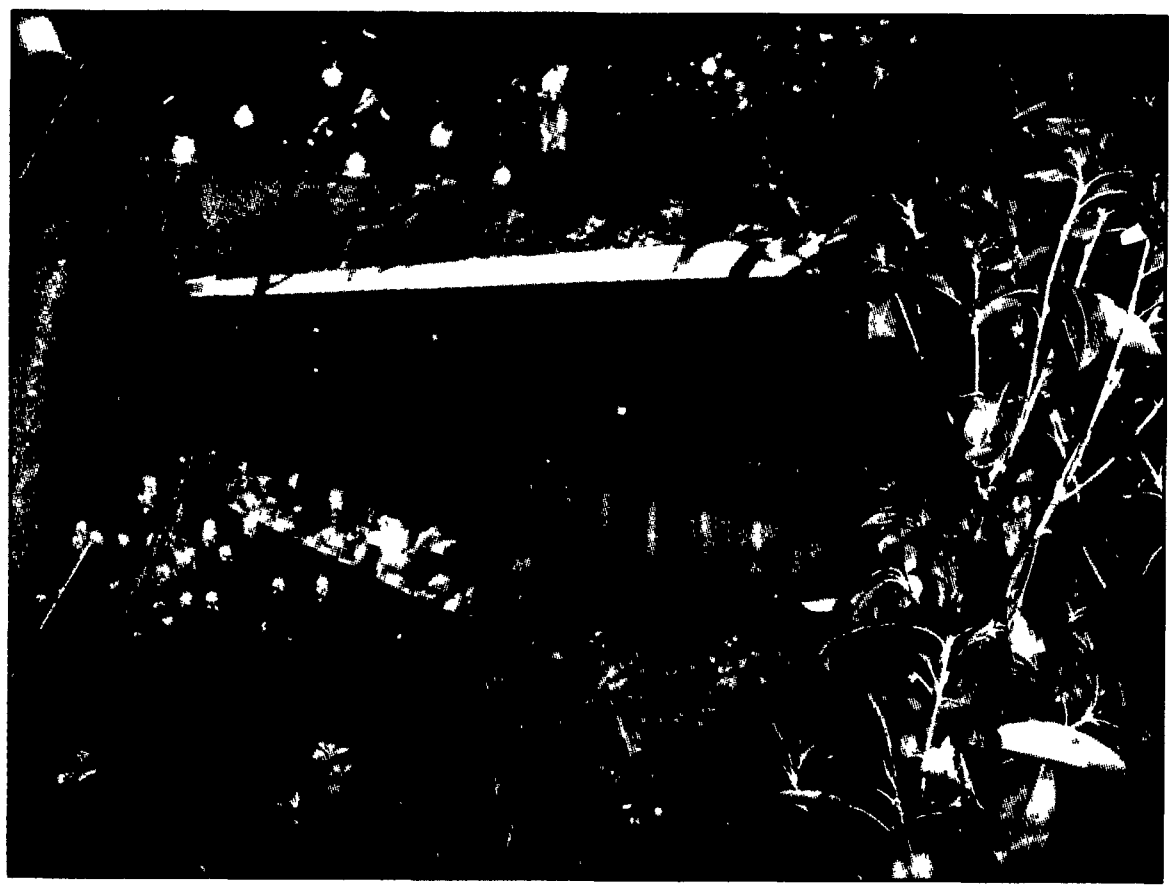
PHILADELPHIA — Gardeners who spend the winter months fantasizing about landscapes with flowers can have some of their dreams fulfilled at the annual Philadelphia Flower show this week.

This giant indoor precursor of spring at the Philadelphia Convention Center features acres of floral and landscape displays to delight artists, naturalists, or anyone at all with a sense of curiosity.

"Exceptional flower design is a hallmark of the Philadelphia Flower Show," according to Jane Pepper, president of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, the organization that produces the show

Besides strolling among the wide variety of exhibits, visitors can also take in garden lectures, landscape workshops, culinary presentations, and visit a marketplace area with many plants, seeds, and bulbs for sale.

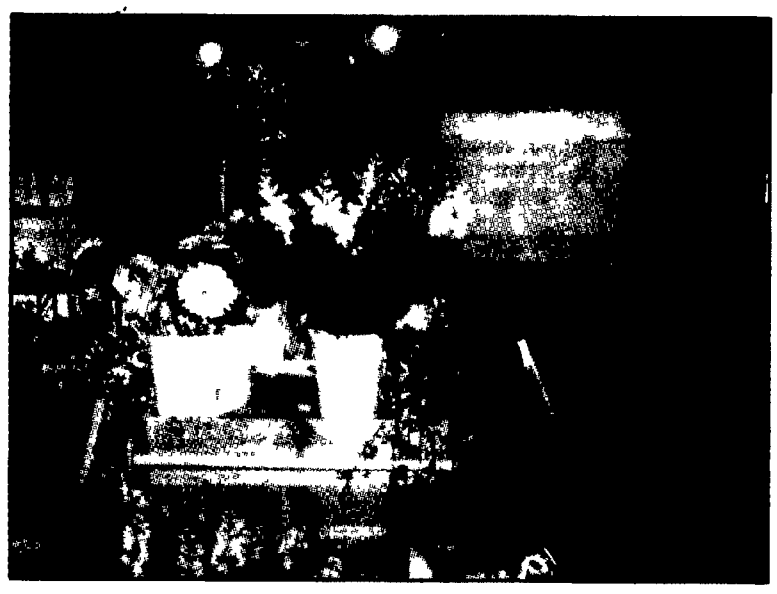
The nine-day extravanganza continues through 6 p.m. tomorrow. Tickets are $22 at the door, $10 for children 12 and under. For more information, call (215) 988-8899.



This exhibit demonstrates an infiltration trench for water running off a roof. Stones in the trench allow for slow movement of the water into the surrounding soil.

The Men's Garden Club of Philadelphia took first place in a landscape contest called "My Little Piece of The Planet" for this portrayal of a woodworker's woods.

Philadelphia Flower Show Welcomes Spring



Flowers favored by the artist Vincent Van Gogh were highlighted in this exhibit. A Van Gogh painting is represented on the screen in the background.

"Farmer-friendly."

That's how a recent headline that passed across our kitchen table reading area describes one of the many legislative proposals included in the current Farm Bill "possibilities" being mulled over by our national lawmakers.

Without going into intricate details, the proposals would begin to nudge this country into greater use of grain-based ethanol products in place of the oil-based energy to which we are all heartily and heavily addicted.

Farmer friendly? Well, sure.

Ethanol can be made from lots of bio-mass materials, theoretically anything from potatoes to weed and grass clippings, I suppose. My chemical engineering knowledge is non-existent or worse, so I'm writing about something I know absolutely nothing about here. (Some of you readers are probably thinking that's not new...) For various reasons, ethanol can apparently be most efficiently produced from grain, and especially corn.

Reaching into history, lots of our ancestors did that.

Some of them did jail time for their expertise. They took the results of fermenting and distilling corn, bottled it up, sold it for human consumption and, well, you know the rest of that story.

Ethanol production is apparently similar. But legal. And, with engine modifications, these corn squeezin's can be used to replace all, or at least a goodly part of, the petroleum we all pump into our vehicles at the rate of millions of gallons daily. Petroleum, of course, is the adrenalin of energy on which our wheels-addicted nation runs, and the underlying many of the issues which have — and continue to — shape world politics. And source of more than one of the world's conflicts.

We have, and have had, at our fingertips, the methodology of manufacturing, from a simple ear of common corn, liquid energy on which our country could, in part anyway, run.

So, for crying out loud, why haven't we done it? It's an issue that has confounded me for a long time.

Grain producers have had the ability for generations to produce much more grain than we can use domestically to feed our own mouths and that of all our two-legged and four-legged animal friends. Also, for decades, our extra grain production has been one of the few positives we market worldwide in trade for things like automotives and electronics.

But our rich productive soils and progressive farming practices have continued to outpace and outproduce our ability to use and market our bins of corn, giant piles of grain, barges laden with soybeans. So we have plentiful stocks of grain, and farmers continue to wrestle with low prices for their productivity.

Meanwhile, every time we crank those fuel pumps or pay our heating bills, we're reminded again that oil-energy is not as cheap as it once was — even though it's cheaper today than it has been in recent times. But we remain a captive and addicted audience to energy being pumped out of ever-dwindling reserves from way under the earth's fragile surface.

We have at our fingertips, the ability to take all this excess grain we have been blessed with being capable of producing. We have the technology and engineering to be able to do it. We have the raw materials, the interest, the savvy — and right here in York County, the interest and studies that could help turn our region's 15 million bushels of annual corn production into helping us to become more energy independent.

A technology that helps free us from our oil bonds, burns cleaner, from a renewable resource which would help keep farmers in business and less land going under concrete and blacktop might be considered "farmer friendly."

But more importantly, it's "American friendly."

So what are we waiting for?

Ohio 4-H Center Campaign Kicks Off Today

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The long-standing dream of an Ohio 4-H Center is closer to becoming a reality, thanks to contributions from Ohio Farm Bureau and Nationwide Insurance Foundation, and the efforts of the Friends of 4-H Committee, comprised of volunteers from all 88 Ohio counties.

According to Jeff King, state 4-H leader, a statewide campaign and fund-raising drive will officially kick off March 9 during the annual 4-H Volunteer Conference in Columbus. The kick-off campaign will let 4-H'ers families, businesses, communities and 4-H alumni know of the proposed Ohio 4-H Center.

Creation of the center is a dream of many, King said, including the late Ed Johnson, founder of the ABN radio network and former host of television's Agri-Country. Planning efforts began in August 2001, when 4-H volunteers were recruited from each county, and statewide leadership sessions were held to assist volunteers with county goals.

The Friends of 4-H Committee is host to county volunteers, staunch supporters from The Ohio State University and Ohio 4-H Foundation, and agriculture industry media representatives. This committee effort joins several other committees who have actively sought partners and donors throughout the state since March 2001.

"The Ohio 4-H Center will be the first of its kind in any land-grant university system in the United States," said Arden Shisler, president and CEO of K&B Transport in Dalton and member of Nationwide's Board of Directors. "Among other things, it will be a training center for volunteer leaders who will return to their communities and lead Ohio youth into the future."

Shisler's own 4-H roots run deep. "Next to the influence of my parents, nothing has had more effect on me than my involvement in 4-H."

Ohio Farm Bureau Federation and Nationwide recently pledged a combined $4 million challenge grant, in addition to an initial pledge of $2 million by Nationwide in September 2000.

"Through the challenge grant, every $2 raised by 4-H members and volunteers will be matched by $1 from Nationwide," King said. "Thanks to the generous leadership of these two organizations, we look forward to reaching our $12 million goal."

Pursuing creation of a center reinforcing 100 years of 4-H missions comes naturally to Nationwide and Ohio Farm Bureau.

"This is part of our heritage," said Shisler. "Nationwide was started by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation 75 years ago. This gift honors our 75th anniversary."

Positive life lessons result from 4-H programs, according to Jack Fisher, Ohio Farm Bureau Federation CEO. "Many families have literally trained their children on the leadership, democracy and lessons taught through 4-H," he said. "Everything about 4-H is compatible with if not one of the foundations — of Ohio Farm Bureau. Our contribution has evolved from the longtime working relationship between Farm Bureau, Nationwide and Ohio agriculture."

"Throughout the state, hundreds of volunteers will be working to inform as many 4-H related persons as possible, so they too, may become part of 'Building the Future of 4-H' through the Ohio 4-H Center Campaign," said Nancy Patterson, chairperson of the Friends Committee. "Interested persons and 4-H alumni should contact their local office of OSU Extension to become involved."

There are currently more than 286,000 youth and more than 30,000 volunteers involved in Ohio 4-H programs.

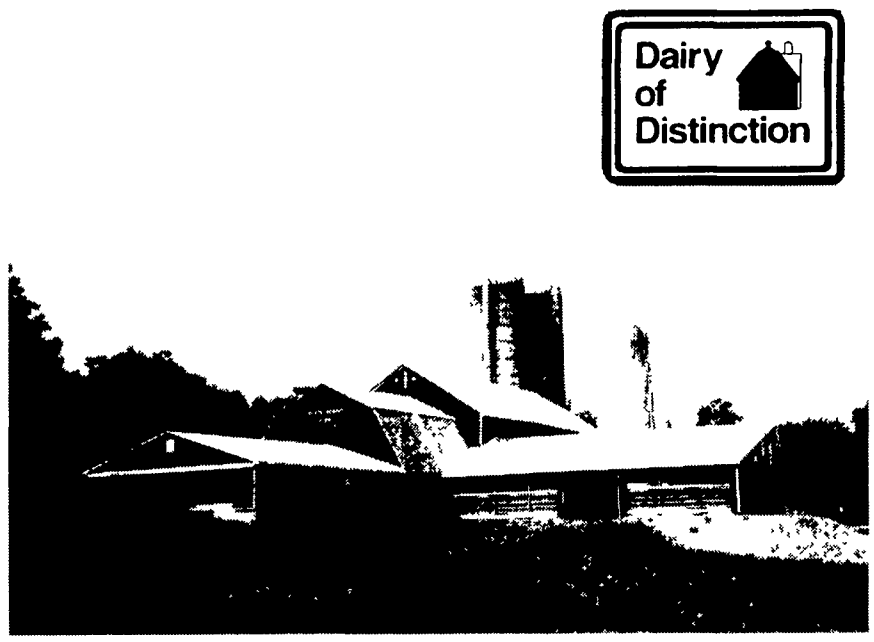
Wanted: Well-Kept Farms For Dairy of Distinction Merit

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Pennsylvania dairy farms are invited to apply for this year's Dairy of Distinction Award from the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program. Applications must be submitted by April 15

The award is based on the idea that attractive farmsteads enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales and public support for the industry Dairies receiving the highest scores in each of 10 Pennsylvania districts will be awarded an 18- by 24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to display in front of their farm.

"This program is run by volunteers and recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy producers who promote a positive image for the dairy industry," said Mike O'Connor, secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction program and professor of dairy science extension in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences

Roadside judging will take place in May Judges will look at factors that can be controlled by the farmer, such as clean and attractively finished buildings, neat landscaping, ditches, roads, and lanes, and well-maintained fences They also will take into account other aspects of the farm, such as cleanliness of animals, the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management



Crystal Spring Farm, Mifflintown

Winning farms will be notified in late June. Because this is a yearly award, previous winners are reevaluated each year to see if they are still maintaining excellent standards.

To receive an application, call Mike O'Connor at (814) 863-3913 or e-mail him at MOConnor@das psu edu

Since 1987, Pennsylvania's Dairy of Distinction Program has recognized more than 750 dairy farms The Pennsylvania program is part of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, which also includes New York, New Jersey, and Vermont Dairies in these states can contact the program secretary in their state for applications

How Is Your Farm Scored?

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors, which can be controlled by the farmer Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane) Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy producers or dairy farming Farmers who apply for awards agree that, if selected, they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition

How The Judging Works

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent of their Dairy of Distinction score card Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality

3 The sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside An attractive post and bracket, or other frame shall be used to display the sign No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign The sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage
4 Signs shall not be moved to other premises New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign
5 Replacement of damaged signs shall be at the discretion of the committee
6 No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses
7 The judges' decision will be final
8 Judging will take place between May 1 and May 31
9 Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1 and April 30 If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1 and May 31 so they have the opportunity to keep the sign

More Than One Way To Make Homemade Pizza

Create your own pizza by trying different sauces and toppings. Shown is a classic pepperoni pizza with green peppers and black olives.

PIZZA CRUST

2 ¼ teaspoons active dry yeast
½ teaspoon brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons olive oil
1½ cups warm water (110 degrees)
3⅓ cups all-purpose flour

In a large bowl, dissolve the yeast and brown sugar in the water, and let sit for 10 minutes.

Stir the salt and oil into the yeast solution. Mix in 2 ½ cups of the flour.

Turn dough out onto a clean, well floured surface, and knead in more flour until the dough is no longer sticky.

Place the dough into a well oiled bowl, and cover with a cloth. Let the dough rise until double; this should take about one hour. Punch down the dough, and form a tight ball. Allow the dough to relax for a minute before rolling out. Use for your favorite pizza recipe.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. If you are baking the dough on a pizza stone, you may place your toppings on the dough, and bake immediately. If you are baking your pizza in a pan, lightly oil the pan, and let the dough rise for 15 or 20 minutes before topping and baking it.

Bake pizza in preheated oven, until the cheese and crust are golden brown, about 15 to 20 minutes.

BISCUIT PIZZA BAKE

1 pound ground beef
2 12-ounce tubes refrigerated buttermilk biscuits
15 ounce can pizza sauce
1 cup chopped green pepper
½ cup chopped onions
3½ ounces sliced pepperoni
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese

In a skillet, cook beef over medium heat until it is no longer pink. Meanwhile, quarter the biscuits, place in a greased, shallow three-quart baking dish.

Top with pizza sauce. Drain beef; sprinkle over the biscuits and sauce. Layer with green pepper, onion, pepperoni, and cheese. Bake uncovered at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes or until cheese is melted. Let stand for 4-10 minutes before serving. Serves 6-8.

Pay More Than The Minimum

It is nearly impossible to function in today's society without using a credit card. Even folks who shun credit in any form will find that owning at least one bank credit card (Visa®, MasterCard®) comes in handy for renting hotel rooms or cars when traveling, and for handling emergencies.

Credit cards, like other items of convenience, are great tools when used properly. Ideally, you should pay each monthly bill in full to avoid all costs or finance charges. Paying entire balances due every month, however, is not realistic for many. When full payment is not possible, reduce the cost of using credit cards by paying more than the minimum amount due stated on monthly billing statements. The minimum amount appearing on your monthly statement may be as low as two percent of the outstanding balance.

For instance, if the outstanding balance is $500, a two percent minimum payment would be $10. As each monthly payment is made, the outstanding balance decreases and so does the stated minimum amount due if no additional charges are added to the account. Most credit card issuers, however, have a minimum amount that is payable each month if the calculated minimum due (e.g. two percent of $500) falls below a certain dollar amount. Your card's lowest minimum payment can be found on the cardholder agreement booklet sent annually by your credit card issuer.

To see the impact of minimum payments, assume that you have a $500 balance on a credit card, which has an annual percentage rate (APR) of 12 percent, and monthly payments will be $10 until the bill is paid. It will take about 70 months (5.8 years) to pay off the bill and it would cost about $197 in interest.

The bottom line is if you consistently pay only the stated minimum, you prolong your repayment period and increase your costs. To see the effect of minimum payments on total finance charges and repayment periods, go to the following Website and insert hypothetical figures: http://www.1stsource.com/calculators.cfm.

When you must use credit cards, be aware that your repayment habits affects your total credit costs. Save a friend, a family member, or a young adult hundreds of dollars by sharing this article with them. For additional information, contact your local Penn State Cooperative Extension office and ask for the fact sheet, "Pay More Than The Minimum."

Attention: Physically Challenged

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Senior citizens and physically challenged persons can continue to live at home and remain independent with the help of the "Seniors in Motion" program.

This program provides mobility equipment usually at no cost to the patient, free in-home evaluations, and equipment fittings. Also, all paperwork is completed by the "Seniors in Motion" staff working directly with the patients' physician. Equipment is delivered to the patient by a rehab representative with safety and operation instructions given.

Call 800-594-1225 for a "mobility needs" consultation and free in-home evaluation.

Physical Activity Part Of The Plan

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — Regular physical activity is also important to overall health. According to the ADA's Nutrition Trends Survey, most Americans (81 percent) believe physical activity is as important as a nutritious eating plan to good health. However, only 43 percent say they make an effort to get regular exercise.

One excuse we often hear for not exercising is "I don't have time." Rather than adding "take a time management class to your "to do" list, consider starting a "don't do" list. You may discover doing less can bring more enjoyment in your life. Exercise and diet are two areas often given the short shift in the typical time-squeeze. Yet they are important for our overall quality of life.

Great idea you may be saying, "but how?" Below are some ideas from individuals who have stopped doing to have more time to focus on eating healthy and exercise:

- I moved my TV from the living room to the recreation room in the basement. I watch very little TV now that I have to make the initial decision to go downstairs to watch it; I use to watch something just because it was on TV and I got involved in the program, now I plan my TV time.
- I replaced styling my hair, mousse, and hair spray and got a wash and wear haircut so I can work out during my lunch hour and still get back to work.
- Instead of getting together with girlfriends for birthday lunches, we get together for birthday runs or birthday walks.
- Don't stay up late watching worthless shows on TV. Go to bed early, get up early and head to the gym to exercise or go for a walk. You'll feel better all day and have lots more energy.
- Don't go near the kitchen or any place else there's food while you're on the telephone.
- Don't keep searching your calendar for an hour block of time to go to the gym and away from your family — look for those opportunities to play and be active. Playing in the park, biking, walking at the zoo, raking and playing in the leaves are all fun for kids and provide a chance to be active.

I'm sure if you thought about it, there are some 'don't do' things you could eliminate to make more time to exercise. To all those couch potatoes, "get up and get moving!"

Experts note that activity doesn't have to be rigorous. Small bits of activity add up over time. Walk around your building — inside and outside — during your lunch hour or coffee break. Most important, choose activities that you can do on a regular basis.

Lebanon County Offers Dairy Princess Informational Pre-Tea

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Do you want to know what being a dairy princess, dairy maid, or li'l miss is all about?

Why not get the real story from the girls who served the previous year.

The Lebanon County Dairy Promotion Committee is holding an informational pre-tea on Tuesday, April 9 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lebanon Cooperative Extension Office. The dairy royalty team will be there to answer all questions.

The 29th annual Lebanon County Dairy Princess Coronation will be conducted Saturday, June 1 at the Lebanon County Career and Technology Center at 7:30 p.m.

Anyone interested in being part of the dairy royalty team should contact Jennifer Bashore at (717) 274-2486.

Educational Series For Parents Of Adolescents

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — For parents of teens, adolescence can be either "the best of times" or "the worst of times," depending on how well parents understand adolescence. That's because adolescents are young people who straddle the fence between childhood and adulthood. They have one foot secured in childhood and one foot moving into the world of adulthood.

Adolescence is a unique period of the human life span. In fact, no other developmental period, with the possible exception of infancy, is characterized by so many complex changes. These changes include very fast physical growth, the rise of reproductive sexuality, new social roles, growth in thinking, feeling, and morals, and school transitions. These changes can make adolescence both exciting as well as awkward.

For parents and adults who interact with adolescents, it's important to understand these changes to better support the adolescents in their lives.

To help parents and adults interact positively with adolescents, Penn State Cooperative Extension has come out with a brand new series, "Understanding Adolescence." This three part series includes: "A Time of Change," "Searching for Themselves," and " The Tasks."

The series is available free from the Bradford County Extension Office. Contact the Extension Office at 701 South Fourth Street, Towanda PA 18848, (570) 265-2896, or bradfordext@psu.edu to request copies.

2 boxes regular chocolate pudding
1½ cups milk
¼ cup butter (actually margarine works better)
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 cups sugar

Mix together pudding mix and sugar; add milk and cook to 200 degrees. (It's convenient to use an electric cooking pot set at 250 degrees). Pour into mixer bowl and beat on low. Add vanilla and butter or margarine while beating. Pour into 9x12-inch pan when it begins to hold a pattern.

ANSWER — Here are some more ideas and recipes that had been requested by Brenda Fouts, Auburn, N.Y. Miriam DeLong, Quarryville, recommends using Glaze A Pie Glaze made by Concord Foods to freeze berries. The glaze is a dry mix in a box. Mix it according to directions on the box except use a few more strawberries. When thawed, the berries stay firm for two days in refrigerator. She also recommends the peach glaze for peaches, but did not like the one for blueberries.

Suzanne McElhenny writes that she doesn't know of a way to prevent mushiness when freezing strawberries, but she knows of a few good ways to use the frozen berries: Puree partly thawed berries in the blender. Mix with an equal amount of applesauce. May add sugar if desired.

Strawberry Pops

1 packet unflavored gelatin
¾ cup milk
½ cup sugar
1 cup boiling water
2 cups frozen strawberries

In blender, sprinkle gelatin over milk. Let stand two minutes. Add boiling water. process 2 minutes. Add berries and sugar. Process at high speed until smooth. Pour into molds. Freeze 4 hours.

1 cup hot mashed potatoes
7-7½ cups flour

Soften yeast in lukewarm water; set aside. Cream sugar and shortening. Add eggs and salt. Heat well. Blend in hot mashed potatoes. Add yeast. Mix well. Gradually add flour mixing well after each addition to form dough. Knead on floured board until smooth and satiny, about 5 minutes.

Place in greased bowl and let rise in warm place until doubled in size. Roll out and cut into doughnut shapes. Place on floured cloth. Let rise about 30 minutes and fry in hot oil. Drain on absorbent paper and glaze while warm.

Sugar Glaze:

Gradually add ½ cup boiling water to 3 cups sifted confectioner's sugar. Stir in 1 teaspoon vanilla. Dip doughnuts in while still quite warm.

ANSWER — Here's a recipe from Maggie Keeler, W.V. in answer to crockpot recipes. Maggie writes that she has a new love and that is making slow cooker rice pudding. She has taken this recipe to potlucks, served it warm and cold and served it for breakfast as a hot cereal or later cold as a dessert. Even doubled, this recipes fits into her 3½-quart crockpot. This recipe she writes is as creamy as those cooked on the stove and a lot easier to make. She adapted this from a recipe used in the 1970s. This version is lower in fat, sugar, and salt, than the original. She writes, "Our tastes have become accustomed to lighter cooking, so we think the lighter version is as good as the richer one.

MK's Slow-Cooker Rice Pudding

1 cup raw, regular short- or long-grain rice
2 cups cold water
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter, optional

Combine in a saucepan, cook until done, about 23 minutes. Should have about 2½ cups cooked rice when done.

Rice Pudding:

2½ cups cooked rice
½ cup granulated sugar (can be half granulated and half brown sugar)
1½ cups scalded milk or 12-ounce can evaporated milk
2 eggs, lightly beaten
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
½-1 teaspoon cinnamon (adjust to taste)
½ cup raisins (I use golden)

Combine in sprayed pot of slow cooker. Cook on low for 4-5 hours or until liquid is mostly absorbed. This recipe doubles easily. Can be served warm or cold. Do not use instant or converted rice.

ANSWER — In answer to Anna Bryan's inquiry about keeping fresh parsley, Amy Marple, Englewood, Fl., writes that she simply washes and drains parsley. Seals it in a baggie and puts in the vegetable drawer of the refrigerator. Keeps about two weeks.

ANSWER — Elinor Klotz requested a recipe for carrot raisin salad. Here is one from Fran Pierman, Stockton, N.J.

Carrot Salad

2 pounds carrots, grated fine
½ cup raisins (soften in boiling water)
1 cup mayonnaise
24-ounce can crushed pineapple, drained

March seems to have been a big month in the life of Alexander Graham Bell.

First Bell was born on March 3, 1847. In 1875 he discovered the principle that made the telephone possible and on March 1876 he was granted the patent for the telephone. The patent covered the method and apparatus used to transmit voice and other sounds telegraphically. Then on March 10, three days after the patent was granted, Bell transmitted the first message by telephone.

Contrary to Bell's assistant Thomas Watson was linked to the sending device in Bell's office by wire and a receiver. The first message sent was Bell saying "Mr. Watson – come here – I want you." Bell's father and grandfather had been public speaking and in teaching deaf people to speak. The Bell family knew the importance of this because Bell's mother and wife were deaf. Bell married Mabel Hubbard who was deaf. Bell also studied anatomy, physiology and music.

Bell's inventions did not begin or end with the telephone. He worked on transmitting several telegraph messages over one line and he was granted patents for a number of other inventions in a variety of areas, including aviation and boating. He also founded the National Geographic Society. All in all, it seems that March was a pretty good month for us too. After all, it brought us Alexander Graham Bell AND the telephone.

Fathers Can Make A Difference By Reading To Their Children

As a father, one of the greatest gifts you can give your kids is a love for reading. Research shows that kids who read daily: Almost always become good students and have an easier time with schoolwork, are more likely to develop a love for reading and become lifelong readers, and are more likely to become lifelong learners.

In fact, child development experts and educators agree that reading is the single most important skill for children to master. And there's good news for parents—research also shows that almost any child can learn to read well. But to become a reader, your child needs your help!

So what can you do to help your child learn to read? The answer is simple: read aloud to your child, as much as you can, as often as you can—every day is best. Reading aloud not only helps children begin to make connections between the sounds of words and the letters on the page, it also helps them learn to love books.

Kids enjoy the attention of being held close in a parent's arms and sharing the magic of a story, and so develop a love for reading. So by reading aloud to your child, you'll help build your child's vocabulary, improve your child's language skills, help your child learn to read, and make your child more likely to become a lifelong reader and learner!

Reading aloud to your child is very important—no matter how old your child is. Talking and reading with your baby helps "wire in" the language connections in the brain and gives your baby an early intellectual boost. And continuing to read with your children—even after they have learned to read on their own—will still be a tremendous benefit to your child.

At all ages, children can hear and understand words and concepts that they could not possibly read on their own. So reading more difficult books to your older children will help expand their vocabulary, increase their knowledge, and develop their enthusiasm for reading. In addition, sharing the experience of reading will bring you and your child closer together—at whatever age your child may be.

To get you started on reading with your kids, here are some general tips: Try to establish a routine by reading to them at the same time every day (before bedtime is preferable).

Don't stop in the middle. Read a chapter or a set number of pages every night until you finish.

Use inflections when you read, and be spirited. Try to adjust the rhythm of your reading to fit the action, for example, during an emotional moment, read slower to create suspense, and make children more interested in the story.

After you and your child read together, talk about what you have read. Ask your child what he or she liked about the story, and tell him what you liked.

To find books to read together, visit your local library with your child. Get your child his own library card, and encourage him to check out books. Pick out books to read together, too.

The following are some suggestions for books to try: For preschool/kindergarten age children: "Farmer Duck" by Martin Waddell, illustrated by Helen Oxenbery.

"Henny Penny," illustrated by Paul Galdone; "Make Way for Ducklings" by Robert McCloskey; "Over in the Meadow" by John Langstaff, illustrated by Feodor Rojankovsky.

For elementary school age children: "Babe, the Gallant Pig," by Dick King-Smith; "Mrs. Frisby and the Rats of Nihm" by Robert O'Brien; "Little House on the Prairie" by Laura Ingalls Wilder.

Penn State Cooperative Extension has pamphlets that are focus on parents reading to their children. They include tips on how parents can make the most of reading time with their parents. These pamphlets can be found at HYPERLINK "http://agexted.cas.psu.edu/fcs/dp/Wizard.html".

Farm Couple Returns From Albania

TRUMANSBURG, Md. — Working with Fellowship of Christian Farmers, Int. George and Julie Holmes, 3220 Jacksonville Road, Trumansburg, just returned from their ninth winter in Albania doing missions work. They are working in six rural villages doing primarily evangelism. While Holmes' are home farming, a team of Albanian Christian young people called SOWERS, continue the village work going three times a week.

Only four other American's came to Albania this year to experience first hand, rural village door-to-door evangelism. The Sept. 11 attack on America, fear of flying, wanting to be close to family, and Albania's traditionally Muslim country were factors involving the low number of people coming to Albania this year. Holmes' found Albania very quiet politically and the people very open to the Gospel.

Changes seen in Albania were the many cell phones in use. In home telephones take years to get, so the cell phone is very popular. Many city parks have been restored, where coffee shops use to be. A super highway is complete from the capitol City of Tirana to the port city of Durres. More food from out of the country is available.

People smile and wave now. People are better dressed and putting on a few extra pounds, too.

Traffic, potholes, poor electric and dust are still a problem. Unemployment remains over 60 percent and corruption is a way of life.

George and Julie find the people warm and friendly despite the conditions. No one wants to go back to the old ways of Communism. This is the country's 10th year of freedom from Communism.

Julie and George Holmes visit Kasselle village in Albania.

Holmes' have a newly-designed slide presentation and table display of this year's work in Albania. To make arrangements for them to come to your church or group meeting, call (607) 387-6538 evenings.

Sweet Celebration Is Premier Maple Syrup Festival

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — Sweet maple syrup dripping over hot buckwheat cakes, maple sugar candy that melts in your mouth, and gooey maple "spotza" mixed with little chunks of ice are some of the reasons visitors return to the Pennsylvania Maple Festival every year.

Even if someone doesn't have a sweet tooth, there will be plenty of things to do on Saturday, March 9, and Sunday, March 10, and the following weekend, March 14-17 in the southern Somerset County town of Meyersdale.

Somerset County, the "Roof Garden of Pennsylvania," has long been recognized as the Commonwealth's largest producer of maple products. The area has been celebrating this unique specialty crop for the past 55 years with the Pennsylvania Maple Festival.

"We have long since been known as the 'Maple City' because of this unique festival centered around maple production," said Lou Tuscano, president of the board of directors for the Maple Festival.

"It's a sweet celebration and one that has longstanding tradition here. It began as a topic of idle conversation by a group of civic-minded men relaxing around a pot-bellied stove 55 years ago and has developed into one of the premiere festivals in our tri-state area."

It was around that pot-bellied stove all those years ago that these men had a vision to promote one of Somerset County's sweetest specialties, maple syrup and the maple production industry. Through doing so, they succeeded in laying the foundation for a volunteer, community festival and the continuation of an industry that may have otherwise waned in the Somerset County area without the promotion of the festival.

"I enjoy boiling maple syrup and each year I try to perfect my operation," said Jeremy Walters, a 22-year-old maple producer from Berlin who won the title of Maple King at last year's festival. "I was really surprised to win since there were so many other producers who had been doing this much longer than I had been. It was an honor."

The Maple King title is based on a competition of 11 different categories of maple products. Penn State extension agents judge the contest. There is also a scholarship pageant for high school senior girls and this year's Maple Queen Natalie Thomas of Meyersdale was chosen as the reigning queen.

Walters explained the maple industry is not always predictable because of variables, such as weather and insect infestation in the trees, but the enjoyment of producing this product outweighs the negatives.

Obtained from the sugar maple tree, maple syrup was first discovered by the Native Americans and then continued by white settlers. Legend has it that the Native Americans celebrated the "maple moon" or "sugar moon" as the return of spring. Their sugar production consisted of dropping heated stones in wooden troughs containing the liquid.

The maple industry itself faced many changes throughout the years. Hand augers and later power drills were used to drill holes in maple trees. Into these holes were inserted wooden, and later metal spiles, to catch the sugar water as it dripped, drop by drop, into wooden, metal, and later plastic buckets, known in Somerset County as "keelers."

A newer method being used in some maple groves is plastic tubing, which transfers sap from the tree to central gathering tanks.

This process called tapping will not harm the trees. If a tree is 10 inches in diameter, it can support one tap; 15 inches, two taps; and 20 inches, three taps. An average maple tree will produce 15 gallons of sap from each taphole per season.

The ideal weather for sap collecting is a freeze at night and a thaw during the day.

Unlike the Native Americans, who used heated stones to evaporate sugar water, or the settlers, who used large iron kettles fired with wood, maple producers now use fuel oil to boil the water. As the sap flows along in a constant boil, the water escapes in the form of steam, and the liquid becomes sweeter and changes to an amber color with the increasing sugar content. As it comes from the tree and enters the evaporator, sap has about two percent sugar content.

After this boiling process, it leaves the evaporators with a sugar content of more than 65 percent. Thus, one gallon of maple syrup weighing 11 pounds was condensed from 40 to 50 gallons of sugar water. Then transferred to flat pans for final finishing, the syrup is forced through special filters to remove any accumulated sediment and stored in 550 gallon-sterile metal tanks, which have germicidal lamps under the lids. Later it is pumped back to finishing pans, reheated to 185 degrees F., refiltered through pressure filters, and packed into cans, bottles, ceramic or plastic containers.

In his sugar camp, Maple King Jeremy Walters incorporates a modern device called a reverse osmosis machine, which uses high pressure to force sugar water through a membrane that allows sugar molecules to escape but prevents the water molecules to get through. This process removes about 75 percent of the water from the syrup.

"If you have 10,000 gallons of water, you eliminate 7,500 and boil 2,500," he explained. "Everything is cut by 75 percent, the boiling time, the fuel, everything, and it makes things a lot easier and quicker."

Maple syrup boiling demonstrations are routinely done in Maple Festival Park throughout both weekends of the festival. The park also houses and gives tours of the historic Maple Manor, which is a 19th Century homestead owned at one time by the town's namesake, Peter Meyers, who died in 1910.

In Maple Festival Park, there are also crafts, a cobbler's shop, an old-time doctor's office, a country store, live entertainment, food booths, and a Civil War troop encampment.

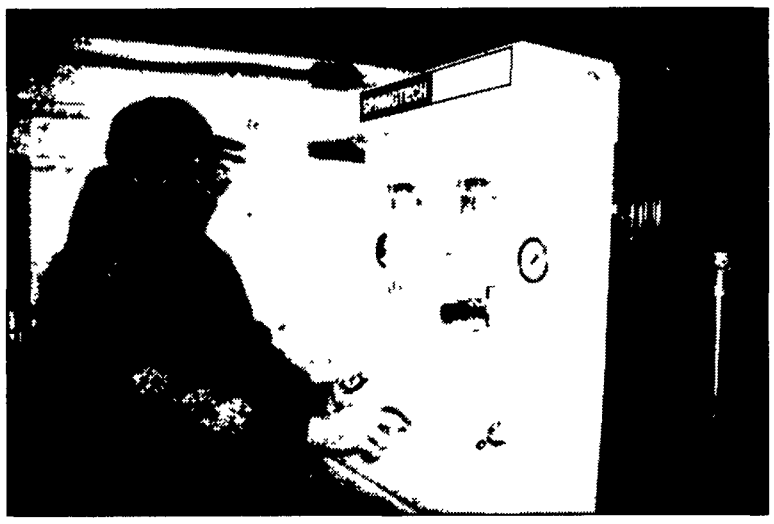
Throughout the town of Meyersdale, there are window displays, agricultural fair exhibits, a quilt show, a pancake house, and a historical pageant called "Legend of the Magic Water."

There will also be a Street Rod and Classic Auto Show on Sunday, March 10, and an Antique Auto Show on Sunday, March 17. Both are to be held on Main and Center streets.

The grand feature parade is scheduled for 3 p.m. Saturday, March 16, and a horse pulling contest at 1 p.m. Sunday, March 17, at the Somerset County Fairgrounds in Meyersdale.

"We have visitors from all over the United States. We offer activities for all ages, for those who have a sweet tooth and for those who don't," said Festival President Tuscano.

The mystic, sweet water that can be boiled into syrup and made into candy even intrigued the Native Americans, who first discovered it before white settlers arrived to Western Pennsylvania. Here, a young visitor at last year's Pennsylvania Maple Festival takes a closer look at the water flowing from a maple sugar tree.



Jeremy Walters of Berlin may be one of the youngest maple producers in Somerset County at age 22 but he won the title of Maple King last year after competing in 11 different categories of maple products to win the title at the Pennsylvania Maple Festival in Meyersdale. Here, he is pictured in his sugar camp by his reserve osmosis machine, which takes 75 percent of the water out of the sugar water through a membrane and cuts time and costs off of boiling the water into syrup. Firefighters turned chefs celebrate Pennsylvania maple sugar season on Friday, March 22, and Saturday, March 23 at 8 a.m.-noon at Philadelphia's Kitchen. In conjunction with Reading Terminal Market's annual Maple Daze event, honoring the maple sugaring season and the small town tradition of the community celebration, Philadelphia firefighters prepare for a marathon two-day Pancake Breakfast benefit at Philadelphia's Kitchen in Reading Terminal Market. All proceeds support the Hepatitis 'C' Awareness Fund. Homemade pancakes and loads of freshly tapped maple syrup will be served both days from 8 a.m.-noon at Philadelphia's Kitchen in Reading Terminal Market. All are welcome to attend. Ida's Notebook by

Ida Risser

Right now the main thing on my mind is the guests that we had for supper last night. Three families came and ate with us and then visited afterwards.

For some reason, entertaining takes a lot of extra work. So, I can see why many people are reluctant to do it. Of course, you want the house to be clean and so you start a few days earlier to do that job. But I am sure that nobody notices that effort.

Then all of my best dishes are stored in the bottom of the corner cupboard in the dining room. This makes it a difficult job to get them and put them away.

Due to my husband's problems walking, I've put away my braided rugs so he will not stumble on them. I did unroll some of them when our guests were here.

A cook likes to hear a few compliments on her meal. The one thing that they enjoyed was our lima beans. I know how much trouble it was to plant, weed, put the tendrils on a fence, and then gather and open them. However, I did expect that they might have said something about the apple and black walnut cake. I suppose they were too interested in talking to notice.

One man had just returned from a trip to Antarctica — that was an unusual trip. His wife had just taken a cruise with her sister. One guest had worked on a ranch in Kansas while another traveled a lot as a representative of a large department store.

This group of retired people had a lot in common even if it was only their health problems. With canes and walkers, people due tend to dwell on their aches and pains. At least they are not bedridden and can still crawl in and out of a car to go to see their doctors.

Fundraising Dinners For Heifer International

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — For more than 50 years, Heifer Project has provided struggling families a way to become self-reliant for food and income. Through the gift of livestock and training, a family can obtain milk, eggs, wool, and income-producing benefits to feed, clothe, and educate children. Each gift multiplies because every family that receives a heifer project animal promises to pass on the gift by giving one or more the animal's offspring to another family in need.

Heifer International supports more than 400 projects in 48 countries, including the U.S. to create sustainable small-scale farm enterprises to improve nutrition and supplement income.

Informational and fundraising dinners are scheduled for southeast Pennsylvania.

- Monday, April 8, 6 p.m., Yoder's Restaurant, 14 S. Tower Rd., New Holland.
- Tuesday, April 9, 6 p.m. East Fairview Church of the Brethren, 1187 Fairview Rd., Manheim.

The featured speaker at both events is Umaru Sule from Cameroon. Umaru's village began working with Heifer International in 1987 after a lake released carbon dioxide gas, killing thousands of people and their cattle. Umaru will speak on the scope and dimensions of the disaster and how Heifer International has gone beyond disaster relief to building sustainable development through capacity building, people to people relationships that changed human behavior.

with instructions for needlepoint, knitting, quilting, crocheting, and other needlework. The reason we do not is that instructions need to be very specific and if one stitch is skipped the item will not turn out properly. It would be very difficult to receive and print perfect-copy instructions, as mistakes are often made in instructions sold by major needlework companies.

ANSWER — For the reader who requested the words to "Black Mountain Light," a reader writes that he thinks the poem requested might be "Brown Mountain Light." She sent in the words that she remembers but writes it may include more verses.

Brown Mountain Light

Long years ago a southern planter
Came hunting in this wild land alone
Here so they say the hunter lost his way
Never to return to his home.
A trusty old slave brought a lantern
And searched but in vain day and night
Now the old slave is gone but his spirit wanders on
And the old lantern still casts its light.

Chorus:
High on the mountain and down in the canyon below
It shines like the crown on an angel
And fades as the mist comes and goes
Away over yonder night after night until dawn
A faithful old slave's come back from the grave
Searching, searching, searching for his master who is long, long gone.

In the days of the old covered wagon when they sat around the campfire at night
With the stars growing dim on the old mountain's rim
They would watch for the Brown Mountain Light.

Corn Growers Advised To Keep Stand Quality In Mind

COLUMBUS, Ohio — As corn growers ready for this year's growing season, establishing quality stands will no doubt be a key focus of their preparations.

Ohio State University agronomist Peter Thomison said that obtaining quality stands, that is, planting corn that is uniformly spaced apart and emerges evenly, is important to the successful growth of the crop and its overall yield potential.

"Stand establishment is a key planting issue that receives a lot of attention," said Thomison. "It goes back to the concept of 'picket row fences' - that evenly-spaced, uniformly developed plants tend to perform better than those that are irregularly planted."

One way growers can achieve those quality stands is to pay attention to planting speeds and the depth at which seeds are planted from field to field.

"Planting speed should be no more than six miles per hour," recommends Thomison. "If a grower plants too fast, it may result in less effective seed singulation and less uniform seeding depth, which can affect establishment of the crown roots of the corn plant."

Also, fluctuating seeding depth from field to field tends to bedevil farmers, said Thomison. "A farmer could start out in one field with seeds two inches deep and then by the time he's at the last field, the seeds might be at a different depth, even though the planter was never adjusted," he said. "They need to be checking their planting depth. Moisture and soil conditions are going to vary and if seeds are planted fairly high and shallow, roots that form close to the soil surface are subject to those fluctuations and will develop more slowly."

"You don't want to have plants coming up two-three weeks apart from one another," said Thomison. "In fields where there are somewhere between 25,000-30,000 stands, younger plants are at a considerable disadvantage for light, nutrients and moisture. Since they are less competitive, the younger plant will usually be barren at the end of the season, which, of course, has an effect on yields."

The mild, dry winter may be driving farmers to jump-start the planting season earlier than normal, but Thomison stresses that soil conditions need to be ideal if farmers are considering such a move. "I think there is some interest in planting ultra-early, say early April or even late March, rather than traditionally early, like late April or early May," said Thomison. "Our recommendations are such that if soils are dry and well-drained, then it's alright to go ahead and plant, but we emphasize the need for well-drained soils, and there are not too many areas that provide that ideal condition at that time of year."

Thomison added that farmers may also want to consider increasing seeding rates by 10-15 percent for earlier-than-normal plantings to compensate for seeds that fail to germinate due to cool temperatures and wet soil conditions.

Additionally, growers are recommended to plant full or late-season hybrids first, followed by mid-season to short-season hybrids. "If they encounter planting delays their greatest yield loss will be associated with full-season hybrids," said Thomison. "So if growers are running into cool, wet weather, plant full-season hybrids first, then follow-up with the mid to short-season hybrids."

Organic Grain Production Seminars Conducted In Ohio

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio — Organic foods are becoming the fastest growing segment of the food industry, driven in large part by health-conscious consumers and a sense of environmental responsibility.

The United States market for organic products has increased at least 20 percent within the past 10 years, and economists predict the trend to continue. As interest in organic products increases, so does the opportunities for farmers to raise organic foodstuffs, which not only include horticultural crops, but corn, soybeans, wheat and other small grains, as well.

For Ohio farmers interested in transitioning their conventional grain fields to organic, the Ohio State University Extension conducted two organic grain production seminars March 5. The program was led by the Ohio State Sustainable Agriculture Team with participation from such organizations as Innovative Farmers of Ohio and Ohio Ecological Food and Farm Association. One seminar took place at Clark State Community College in Springfield, Ohio, and a condensed version of the program was presented at the John Hirzel Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education Site on St. Rt. 582 near Bowling Green, Ohio.

"On a national basis, there is definitely an interest and growth in organic production and economists looking at the big picture are predicting that this is not just a blip. It's here to stay," said Deborah Stinner, an Ohio State researcher, who discussed university research on organic production and how a farmer can transition his conventional field to an organic one.

"There has been a lot of focus on the transition process which is very difficult. We are very up front when we say that transitioning to organic is not for the faint of heart," emphasized Stinner. "There is no standard prescription for us to say, 'do it this way and you'll make lots of money and have an easy time of it'."

Organic production is defined as a farming practice that relies upon crop rotation, crop residues, composts and manures, legumes, mechanical cultivation and biological pest control to maintain soil fertility, supply nutrients and control insects, diseases and weeds and avoids the use of chemicals, fertilizers or growth regulators.

"Conventional land is accustomed to having a lot of external inputs," said Stinner. "When one switches to organic production, it forces that land to shift into biologically controlled aspects of crop fertility, nutrient, and weed interactions, and a lot of interesting changes can happen."

By far, the biggest challenge for farmers in transitioning to organic production is effectively controlling weeds. In a recent Ohio State survey of organic producers, weeds ranked as the top productivity barrier in organic production, accounting for nearly half of all areas of concern.

"For many organic farmers the challenges with weed control are found in raising soybeans. Organically grown corn under weed stress seems to fair better," said Stinner, citing Ohio State organic corn research last year that yielded at least 120 bushels per acre in a drought year. "That's some good news, at least."

An attractive premium price on organic products may lure farmers into raising organic crops, but Stinner recommended that farmers start small and take organic production in stride.

A farmer must follow organic management guidelines for three years before his or her farm is certified and allowed to market crops as organic and receive the premium rates. "A grower is not going to be able to take these grains down to the local elevator. Marketing is a very important aspect of organic production," said Stinner. "The organic markets are there, but the grower needs to go out and find those markets and that takes a lot of time."

After October 2002, all products sold as organic will be required to be U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) certified according to uniform National Organic Standards. Information on these federal standards was presented at the workshops. The number of certified organic acres in Ohio has reached 30,000 with the largest organic farm topping out at over 1,000 acres. "The average organic farm is much smaller than that," said Stinner.

In 1996 organic products accounted for only about one percent of national food sales, and took in about $4 billion annually. In 2000, organic retail sales rose to $7.8 billion and accounted for two percent of at-home food sales. By comparison, conventional food-store sales take in over $400 billion a year.

NJSA Announces Plans For Eastern Regional Show At KILE

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — The second annual National Junior Swine Association Eastern Regional will take place at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, on Oct. 4-6, in conjunction with the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE).

The event will kick off Friday night with registration and check-in of gilts from 5-9 p.m. Gilts may begin entering the fairgrounds at 8 a.m. Friday, and must be in place by 9 p.m. Friday. On Saturday, participants will compete in a skillathon from 8 a.m. — noon, and a showmanship contest at 1 p.m. Following the showmanship contest, a purebred Duroc, Hampshire, Landrace and Yorkshire gilt show will take place. Each of these contests will contribute points toward a sweepstakes award in each division.

All NJSA members are eligible to participate if they are 21 years and under as of Jan. 1, 2002. There will be four divisions: Senior (17-21), Intermediate (13-16), Junior (9-12), and Novice (8 and under).

The Eastern Regional Committee will be chaired by Dave Holloway, Glen Rock, Pa. Other committee persons include Harry Bachman, Annville, Pa.; Ellie Bard, Portage, Pa.; Ken Fetterolf, Beavertown, Pa.; David Hosterman, University Park, Pa.; Doug Koontz, Everett, Pa., and Darlene Livingston, Seven Valleys, Pa.

This committee will not only promote the show and encourage participation from the Eastern states, but they will also serve as a medium between the voice of junior exhibitors and their parents, and the National Swine Registry. All questions and suggestions may be fielded to either the committee or NSR, depending on individual preferences.

The 2002 National Junior Swine Association Southwest Regional Show will take place Sept. 20-22, at the Comanche County Fairgrounds in Lawton, Okla.

For more entry information, visit our Website at www.nationalswine.com, or contact Jennifer Shike, NSR junior coordinator at the National Swine Registry, P.O. Box 2417, West Lafayette, IN 47996-2417, or by phone at (765) 463-3594 or by e-mail at jennifer@nationalswine.com. Entries must be postmarked by Aug. 30.

Heat with Corn!

Made in USA

A BETTER ALTERNATIVE
The corn burning furnace has many advantages over wood and coal heat. The large storage bin holds up to 14 bushels of fuel, which is automatically fed into the combustion chamber as needed. There's no need to load the furnace several times a day. The use of corn also eliminates the bark mess, insects, splinters, and handling problems connected with the use of wood fuel, and the dust and dirt from coal. UL Approved.

Bringing Order Out Of Chaos

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

KIRKWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — When the auctioneer bangs his gravel, it signals the beginning of bidding. But for those who work behind the scenes, the work has already been in progress for weeks, sometimes months.

Recently a team of workers from Whyte's Auctions, Kirkwood, prepared for an estate sale. They sorted the trash from collectibles. They washed and arranged the dishes and glassware on long tables. Linens, curtains, and other fabrics have been organized into stacks.

Neat, orderly arrangements of housewares, tools, and assorted items mean more dollars in the pocket for the seller, according to Larry Whyte, auctioneer.

"Clean sells," Whyte said.

If bidders see sparkling crystal, they are inclined to see its value quicker than if the pieces are covered with grime and dust.

So employees like Bonnie, Susie, and Jake have a full-time job washing, scrubbing, and sorting. They are part of the team that prepare items for sale. Sometimes this takes them to estates where the home and its care have greatly deteriorated because of the owner's advanced age or health problems.

Sometimes family members have rooted through the contents of a house to claim valuable pieces and left everything else in disarray. Clutter strewn throughout the house makes it difficult for the team to even walk.

But they tackle good and the bad aspects of the job. Sometimes, their hard work pays off with a surprising find and sometimes with some unsettling scares.

As the team huddles in a closet sorting through stuff, Bonnie screams. She had just picked up a jar of what she thought were crawling bugs. Closer inspection reveals that they are locust shells preserved in a jar labeled 1919.

Anyone interested in locusts shells from 1919? That's the decision that needs to be made about every item in a house.

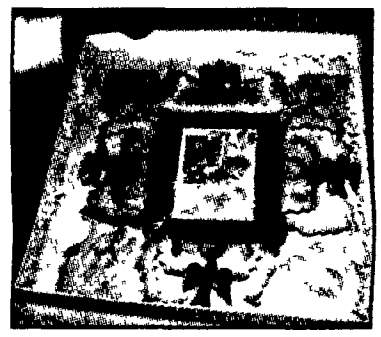
Whyte, a certified appraiser, tells the owners, "Don't throw anything away until I see it."

What one person discards as junk is another person's treasure. Nostalgia is a driving force behind the demand for many collectibles. Bonnie and Susie found a stack of old checks from local businesses and mail order companies. Many of the checks were made out for one to five cents, which is sure to intrigue a bidder.

"The crowd knows the value and what they are willing to pay," said Whyte, who shies away from predicting what pieces will bring.

"People expect us (auctioneers) to know what stuff is worth. But you can't predict. An item will bring $100 one day, and the next day the same item will go for $300. It all depends if two people want the same item.

"Different buyers are walking in and out of the property throughout the day of the sale, and going prices reflect that change."



This delicate Valentine is one of several the owner saved from the 1800s.

Whyte became intrigued with auctions as a boy accompanying his dad to county sales. "It was the excitement and curiosity that appealed to me," Whyte said. He served as an auctioneer apprentice for two years and took the state test to become a licensed and bonded auctioneer in 1986.

"Every day is different. It's a challenge to sort trash from collectibles, to inventory every item, and arrange the items for sale," Whyte said. "Some families want to do it themselves, but when they get halfway done, they get frustrated and call me. I prefer to do it so that I know exactly what is there."

Bonnie finds a Young's muffin tin from Philadelphia that is filled with old buttons.

When Whyte and his eight helpers walk into a place to prepare it for the sale, they often feel overwhelmed.

"But you start one place at a time. And it all comes together like a puzzle," Susie said. "It's always fun to find neat stuff."

Whyte said that if family members claim everything of value for themselves before the sale, they won't have as good of sale, because collectors won't see anything advertised worth coming to buy.

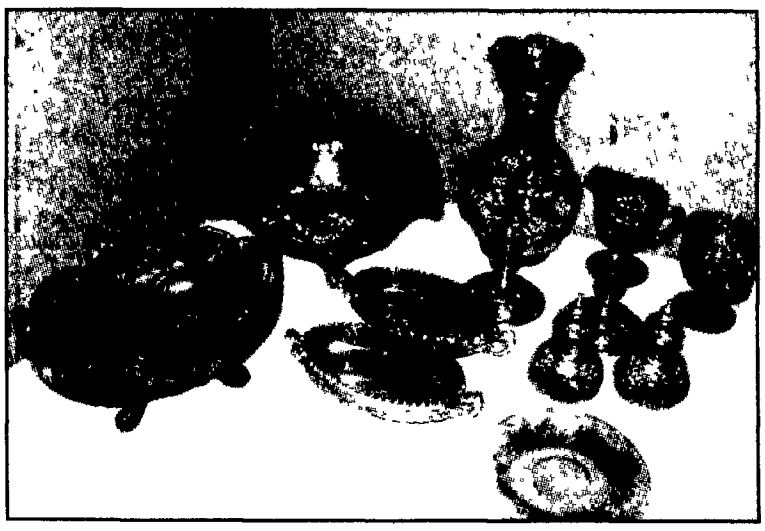
"It's better if the family buys pieces they want at the sale," he said.

Some sales require two to four days to liquidate items.

In recent years, eBay sales on the Internet have greatly increased. Whyte doesn't view this as harmful competition. "Instead, eBay has helped us with small items. People use eBay as sort of a guideline to set prices."

Whyte estimates that about 75 percent of the regular bidders buy to resell items at their shops or on eBay.

In preparation for an upcoming estate sale, Larry Whyte, auctioneer, sorts through boxes of stuff to determine how items should be displayed. Whyte, also a certified appraiser, said that it is always a challenge for him and eight employees to sort trash from antiques, collectibles, and useful items and arrange them for display.



Clean sells, according to Whyte, so he has all dishes washed and the same styles displayed together on cloth-covered tables.

Bonnie examines the dishes to determine which ones to advertise in the sale bill.

Vintage hats spanning a 50-year fashion history will go to the highest bidder.

Sandwich Glass Used Varied Styles, Techniques

There was a time when the glass produced by the Boston & Sandwich Glass Co., in Sandwich, Massachusetts was know as the Baccarat of America. A high compliment indeed.

It's earliest form, and most familiar, are the lacy pressed glass pieces, beginning around 1826. However, during it's 63 years of operation, many other techniques were used. These included blown molded, cut overlay, ruby-stained and blown molded opal (both with raised designs and dcorated).

In it's most unique forms as well as the cup plates, it has held great appeal for collectors, reflected in the high prices.

Perhaps the most prolific collector was the late Frank Jedlicka, whose collection of more than 900 pieces of sandwich glass recently came to auction. His collection is proof of the importance of research, especially since the glass wasn't signed, and often attributed to other makers. As with all antiques, the more unusual and rare the piece, the higher the price.

While most of the pressed glass

Antique Detective

plates had estimates of $200/300 a silver-blue, pressed lacy glass cup plate was estimated at $1,500/1,800. A c.1835-55, silver blue pressed and blown molded ink set was estimated at $25,000/35,000.

The Company also designed utilitarian objects such as jars and soap boxes. Most of these date from 1840-1870. Open and covered salts and lidded containers such as egg dishes.

Serious collectors search for the covers first then the missing containers, that are easier to find.

Choice and always pricey are the whimsical covered dishes and jars with the lids in the form of an animal or reptile figure. One example would be the pressed bear jars made in a variety of colors, styles, and sizes, dating from 1850 to 1870.

Worth studying are the many types of vases made by the Sandwich Company. They could be free-blown, pressed in patterns, Peach blow (fragments have been found on the site), only in vase form, for a short period of time.

Toy versions were made of adult-size pieces, in color and clear, from mid-19th century to 1870. Since they had hard useage, they are a rarity these days.

There were also glass knobs for drawers, as well as curtain tiebacks and whimseys, made as decorative accessories. They came in opalescent and clear.

CLUES: Color, especially dark blue, always commands a higher price. For instance a pair of clear, dolphin figural candlesticks can have an auction estimate of $150/250. In dark blue, $6,000/8,000.

Even in the 19th century there were copycat, lacy glass pieces.

Over the years many midwestern firms did their versions of the most popular Sandwich designs. Generally, by comparison with Sandwich, they have a coarser look. There were also glass houses in the Pittsburgh area that produced lacy-style glass.

Sandwich dup plates were heavily reproduced, especially in the 1920s-1930s. And, again in the 1970s. A tap with a finger and a resulting bell tone ring will identify Sandwich and period Sandwich-type pieces. Reproductions have a dull thud and the glass has a brighter look. The same applies to the historical patterns, such as the Lincoln Drape.

Worth studying are the many tupes of vases made by the Sandwich company. They were free-blown, pressed in pattern, pillar-molded and blown-molded.

Shapes ranged from trumpet to straight or fluted, mounted on a variety of base shapes.

Since the early pieces were made of lead flint they should ring when tapped.

For more information check the series, "A Guide To Sandwich Glass" written by Raymone E. Barlow and Joan E. Kaiser, published by Schiffer and Barlow-Kaiser Publishing Company. The guide is usually available in museum gift shops and at antique shows.

Mason-Dixon Tractor Pull

DELTA (York Co.) — The Antique Tractor Pulls at the Mason-Dixon Fairgrounds, Delta, will have a new look this year beginning with the spring pulls on May 18.

For some additional interest, increased competition and expanded opportunities for seasoned and new competitors, the committee for the Antique Tractor Pulls of the Mason-Dixon Fair Association is adding tractors of the 1960s to the pulling mix.

All tractors produced in the 1960s and those of the same generation built no later than 1972 will be added to the competition.

In addition, pull speed limits will be monitored and enforced beginning this season. Speed limits will be in the 2.5 to 3.5 mph range depending on the pulling class. The class of 2,800 pounds will now go up to 3,000 pounds.

Something new for the pulls to be conducted during the Mason-Dixon Fair will be a pull-off on Saturday, July 13 at approximately 7:30 p.m. Registration forms and rule packets will be mailed to all on the mailing list in April (those having competed in 2000 and 2001); or may be obtained by phoning Don Merryman at (410) 838-5842 or Patrice McInaw at (717) 456-9936.

Preregistration is always encouraged and it is cheaper than on the pull date. So mark your calendars for May 18 for the second annual Spring Antique Tractor Pull. The Mason-Dixon Fairgrounds are located on Route 74 in Delta, behind the Allfirst Bank.

All proceeds will go toward the 2002 Maxon-Dixon Fair that will take place from July 8 through the 13th.

The Dersham family has owned this place since 1947 It was a cornfield when we came here The original building plan turned out to be very expensive, so we built our own building (that building is still on the property) We opened for business on June 17, 1947. We progressively built other buildings (the motel in 1948, the restaurant in 1949 and the building you see here in 1950) When this building was completed, the original was moved to the back of the lot and became a rental unit, which we do presently The diner building was purchased in 1968 and was opened for business on our property in 1972 We purchased adjoining properties and at present time we own lots one through nine, which comprise of about nine acres We have been at the same location, owned and operated by the same family and have incidentally only sold one brand of gasoline We started out with Esso, then Exxon and now Exxon-Mobile -- March 2002

FARM TIRES
THE LEADER IN THE FIELD

Evolving Precision Agriculture Technology Fattening Farmers' Wallets

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The biggest driving force behind adopting precision agriculture technology is how quickly a farmer can recoup the investment costs of the equipment.

Ohio State University researchers, in an effort to provide information on the most accurate, cost-effective equipment on the market, have found global positioning guidance systems that not only have the potential to pay back to the user, but operate under minimal costs.

Reza Ehsani, an Ohio State Extension precision agriculture state specialist and Matthew Sullivan, an Ohio State Extension program specialist, have tested six commercially available differential global positioning system (GPS) guidance systems with WAAS (Wide Area Augmentation System) differential signal.

WAAS is a GPS differential source originally provided by the Federal Aviation Administration in air travel that has the abilities to calculate accurate GPS correction signals for precision agriculture.

"In order for a GPS receiver to be accurate, one needs to have a differential source and there are three sources available to farmers: commercial satellite providers, Coast Guard beacon signals and a new source known as WAAS," said Ehsani. "GPS guidance systems are examples of how technology can pay back to the farmer and they are the quickest way of doing it that has been on the market so far."

The researchers believe WAAS may be advantageous in precision agriculture technology for a variety of reasons. The WAAS signal can be picked up throughout the North American continent and is free to use. In addition, WAAS uses the same signal frequency as the GPS signal and many guidance systems are available that operate with WAAS.

In some cases, these systems are cheaper than GPS guidance systems that are using other differential correction sources. Coast Guard beacon signals are free, but are restricted to bodies of water and become degraded as the distance increases from the source. Commercial satellite providers charge an annual fee to use their signals.

"WAAS, we think at least in Ohio, is a very good differential GPS source for farmers. They can use it directly or as a backup to their current differential source" said Ehsani. "In our evaluations, we were interested to see how accurate GPS guidance systems with WAAS were and their cost-effectiveness."

Based upon research, conducted in central Ohio, the researchers found that, 95 percent of the time, the systems had the accuracy of staying within 20 inches of the desired position when driving in a straight line. On a typical Ohio farming operation this 20-inch error can be expressed as a two-percent overlap with a 90-foot boom width compared to a possible five-six percent overlap with traditional foam markers.

"That's pretty good for farmers to conduct a variety of field work, from spraying to laying down fertilizer with a low percentage of overlap," said Sullivan. "And that three percent advantage over foam markers when spraying a 2,000-acre operation, for example, it means 60 acres less in overlap, potentially saving the farmer $900 in chemical applications at $15 an acre per year. Plus taking into consideration the time and fuel the farmer saves and the wear and tear on his tractor."

In addition, the free source of differential GPS saves farmers around $800 a year in subscription costs and many companies that provide guidance systems with WAAS-only GPS receivers can save the buyer up to $1,500 compared to a GPS receiver that receives more than one type of differential frequency. The cost of guidance systems runs between $4,000 and $13,000 depending on their complexity.

Before purchasing any kind of guidance system, however, farmers are urged to make their own evaluations and shop around for the system that suits them best, depending on their farming situation and what features the guidance system offers. Such factors, said the researchers, do have an influence on the performance of the equipment and its overall effectiveness in the field.

New Ag Group Seeks To Improve Worker Relations

FINDLAY, Ohio — Agricultural employers seeking to improve their human resource management skills have assistance from a new organization.

Mid American Ag and Hort Services, Inc. (MAAHS), a consortium of Ohio and Indiana associations, organizations and employers, was designed to help agricultural employers effectively address employee concerns and improve their working and earnings environments, specifically with migrant labor.

"Migrant labor, specifically within the Hispanic population, is steadily increasing in Ohio, especially in agricultural, nursery and landscape professions," said Ron Overmyer, an Ohio State University Extension agent and a MAAHS advisory board member. "The development of MAAHS is in response to the increasing interest in improving human resource skills of agricultural employers."

Current sponsor members of MAAHS include the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, Indiana Farm Bureau, Ohio Nursery & Landscape Association, Ohio Florists' Association, Ohio Fruit Growers Society, Ohio Vegetable and Potato Growers Association and Ohio Landscapers Association.

Post Protector Revolutionizes Post Frame Construction

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — "Post Frame" or "Pole Buildings" originally gained popularity on the farm because of the speed by which they are built and their affordability.

Because of these attributes, coupled with great design flexibility, this construction type has gone mainstream. Workshops, office buildings, schools, showrooms, retail centers, and residential dwellings are all examples of how post frame construction has reached new heights.

Despite post frame gaining popularity, there is one issue that consumers, engineers, and architects are concerned with — post life.

Post frame utilizes pressure treated posts placed upright, three to four foot below ground level. They act as both the building's foundation as well as the nucleus for the building's framework

Even though pressure treated posts are used, many variables exist that can lead to decay — moisture, particular types of soil, concrete backfilled against post, animal waste, termites, climate, or inferior post quality to name a few.

Recognizing this, Post Protector was developed to eliminate concern that these variables cause. It is a five-foot sleeve that simply slides over the post prior to its insertion in the ground. It is made from a specialty lyethylene commonly used to produce landfill liners. Post Protector provides hundreds of years of geo-application life and guarantees no wood-to-soil contact.

Post Protector does not stop at just preventing decay. It also provides a tremendous amount of post uplift protection to ensure the post is sufficiently anchored below grade.

Moreover, there is growing concern that CCA (chromated copper arsenic), used to chemically treat posts, leaches into soil and ground water. Post Protector eliminates this contamination.

New Holland TL Standard Tractors Suited For Haying, Mowing, And Loader Work

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland's TL Standard tractors (66- to 82-PTO hp) are value-packed, economical tractors with features that are especially well suited for loader work, haying and roadside mowing. All models are available with 2WD or FWD, and with a cab or ROPS.

TL Standard tractors are equipped with a dependable 12 x 12 SynchroCommand™ mechanical shuttle transmission. With this transmission, the operator can shift and shuttle on the go. Forward and reverse speeds are matched for smooth direction changes. There are equal forward and reverse speeds available in every gear just the right combination for smooth, easy, loader work cycles.

A dedicated, left-hand mechanical shuttle gives operator left-hand control of forward and reverse and right-hand control of the loader, making loader operation easier. Visibility of the loader bucket is excellent with the TL tractor's sloping hood and the "A" pillar exhaust (on cab models).

The Model 52LA loader has a large, 3,720-pound lift capacity, a lift height of 135 inches and a reach of 48 inches. The TL Standard tractor easily handles this loader, which is larger than the loaders offered with competitive tractors of similar horsepower.

The TL Standard is an economical tractor for haying. Its 12 x 12 transmission has four gears in each of the four ranges and a total of seven gears in the 2- to 9-mph working range. With four gears in each range, less shifting is needed between ranges. There is a total of seven gears in the working range, so operators can easily select the right working speed for every job.

Whether cab or ROPS, the operator can get on to the tractor from either side. Cab doors have a single piece of glass for improved side visibility and two front working lights attached to the left and right cab handles improve forward visibility.

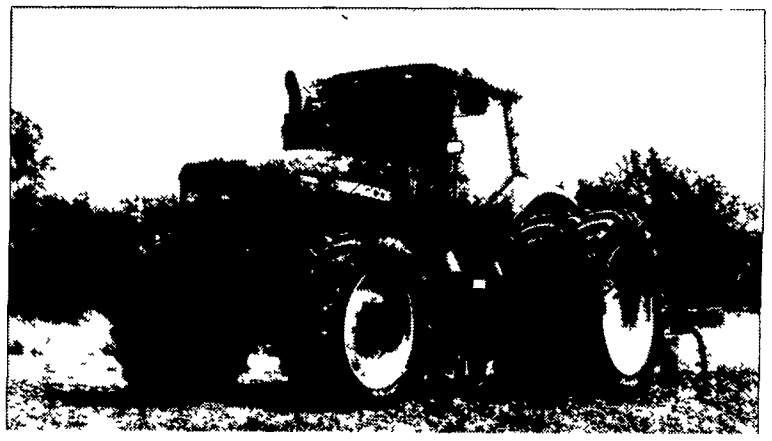
The roomy cab features two-door access, air conditioning, a flat floor, suspended pedals, conveniently located controls, comfortable suspension seat and a tilt/telescoping steering wheel. A small spotlight illuminates the right hand console for night operation.

New 160-225 HP Agco® DT Tractors Launched

ATLANTA, Ga. — AGCO Corporation has introduced the new AGCO DT Series tractor line consisting of four models from 160 to 225 PTO horsepower. All are powered by renowned Cummins CTA-8.3 turbocharged six-cylinder diesel engines and feature 18-speed, dual-control, Powershift transmissions, powered front axles and deluxe cabs.

The cab provides 61 square feet (5.7 square meters) of glass with doors on both sides. In addition to the cloth-covered, swiveling air-ride seat with armrest console, there's an instructor's seat with seat belt, footrest and backrest. Large, extendable mirrors are standard.

The LCD dashboard display clearly shows all critical engine and tractor operations, and, with optional radar, true ground speed, rear-wheel slippage and field acreage. All tractors are also "Fieldstar® Ready" for precision farming.



New Agco DT Series tractors provide new features and options in the 160- to 225-horsepower range.

All AGCO DT tractors feature a sculptured cast-iron frame and chassis for exceptional strength along with improved front-tire clearance to allow a 55-degree steering angle. The engine is cantilever-mounted onto the transmission to minimize torsional and shock loads.

Two conveniently located shift levers control the 18x6, electronic-controlled, powershift transmission. The lever in the right armrest controls pulse speed changes and park. A second lever, on the left side of the steering wheel, changes speeds by pulse or sequential shifting (hold the lever to shift through several gears at once), and controls the forward/reverse shuttle.

All AGCO RT tractors come standard with premium Michelin® Agribib™ tires with superflex sidewalls for better ground contact, and unique R1W parallel-side lugs that retain virtually new-tire traction throughout the life of the tire.

Case IH Application Equipment Names Director Of Sales

BENSON, Minn. — Steven M. Koep has joined Case IH as the application equipment director of sales and national accounts.

This is his second experience with Case IH. He previously served in various marketing positions for almost two decades — from 1974 to 1992.

In his new post Koep manages wholesale and retail sales through Case IH application equipment distributors in North America.

"I look forward to the opportunity to promote and sell the Case IH line of application equipment," says Koep. "The line features many significant product enhancements, is growing in popularity, and is being recognized by more and more customers as the most productive solution for their application needs."

Steven M. Koep

Before rejoining the company, Koep served as vice president of sales and marketing for Ag-Chem Equipment Company Inc. of Minnetonka, Minn., a position he held since 1999. He joined the firm in 1992 and earlier served as director of marketing services and vice president of marketing. Ag-Chem is a manufacturer of custom fertilizer application equipment and a direct retailer of its farm equipment and software.

In his earlier stint with Case IH, Koep served as director of North American marketing services from 1988 to 1992. Before that, he was a regional sales marketing manager from 1985 to 1988, with responsibilities in Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, and Montana. From 1980 to 1985 he served as a sales- and product-training supervisor, and from 1974 to 1980 was a territory marketing manager and market representation specialist.

Yetter Facilitates On-Line Buyers Guide

COLCHESTER, Ill. — One of the challenges facing those who practice conservation tillage involves selecting the attachments that will match the clearance window on a particular planter and thus maximize their productivity. The Yetter Manufacturing Company announces additions to its on-line Buyers Guide, at www.yetterco.com, that make proper selection easier than ever.

New to the Buyers Guide are Kinze 3000 Series planter models and a number of additional dimensional drawings, including those for the Space Saver coulter and the spike closing wheels

"The whole purpose of the Buyers Guide," according to Yetter Service Technician Jim Lascelles, "is to eliminate uncertainty and wasted time in equipment selection. It makes it easy to identify the right Yetter part number by planter manufacturer, number of rows and row spacing." The range of John Deere, White, Case/IH, Kinze and Monosem planters is included.

Pages are organized by planter make and model, which are listed and linked on a Contents page, and they cite yetter dry and liquid fertilizer coulters with standard and side profile knives. "The user is never more than a click or two away from the right page," says Lascelles.

Lascelles notes that the Buyers Guide also includes other helpful features, including data and drawings on coulter blade options and on set-ups that clarify proper planter height and fertilizer knife adjustments.

Implement Attachment Easy As 1, 2, 3

TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — For years operators have been asking for it, and John Deere has delivered. With the introduction of the iMatch™ ASAE Cat. 1 Quick-Attach Hitch, operators can attach implements easier and quicker on all 4000 Ten Series tractors.

This system, exclusive to John Deere, [illegible] points of a three-point hitch to fixed hooks and attaching points. Operators can now simply back up the tractor and slide on the PTO shafts. The new system is ideal for commercial users who need to save time and homeowners who need an easier way to work with a variety of tools.

Though this system is exclusive to 4000 Ten Series, older implements can easily be attached to 4000 Ten Series Cuts by merely removing the iMatch mounting plate.

The iMatch Quick-Attach Hitch system meets all American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE) standards and is an affordable, available option for all models of the 4000 Ten Series compact utility tractors.

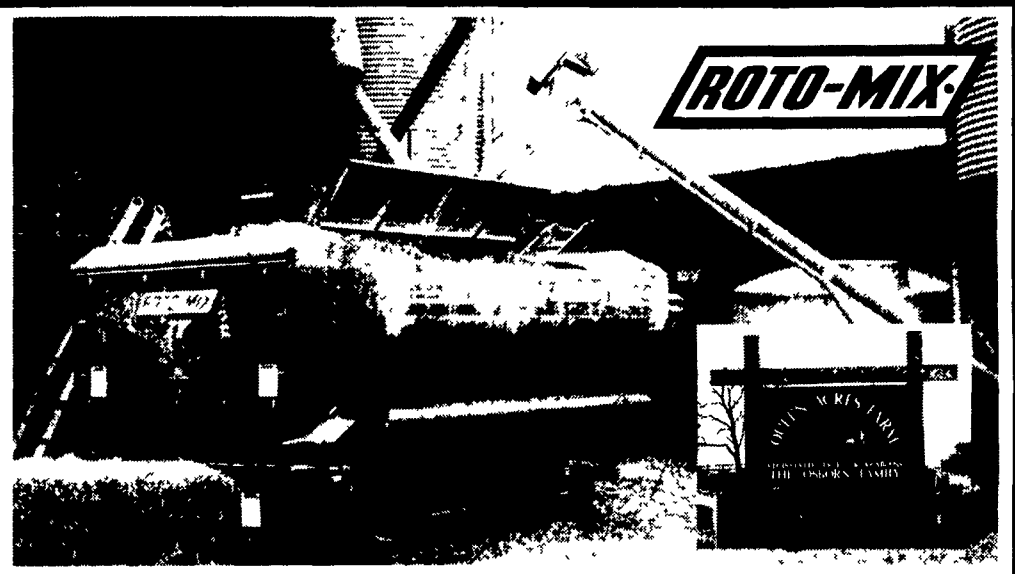
CLEVITE ENGINE PARTS — PTO Clutches



"No auger mixer can process and mix dry long hay like a Roto-Mix mixer can."

- Jim Osborn, Queen Acres Farm, Keymar, MD

"When I do the feeding I like to load the hay into the mixer early in the mix. That allows the hay to be processed to a shorter fiber length. When Jim does the feeding he loads the hay in last, he likes to see a longer fiber. Either way the cows eat it. We clean very little out of the feed bunk."

- J.W. Wotthlie, Farm Manager

Queen Acres Farms is the home of the 7th ranked Jersey herd in the nation, milking 110 cows.

- Using Roto-Mix Model 354 stationary mixer, powered by two 10 hp single phase electric motors. Purchased from Lapp's Barn Equipment in 1997 to replace a 1 yr. old, 4 auger mixer.
- Mixing TMR, 46 lbs. per cow per day, including 5 to 6 lbs. of dry baled hay.
- High herd average for milk production - 19,600 lb. with high protein test and high butterfat test - 5.1%

Increase Your Loading Efficiency with Kramer

"We needed something a lot more maneuverable and versatile, and that's what attracted me to the Kramer 418 It's very narrow and it turns really tight, which makes it a lot easier to work in tight spots With the 4-wheel drive it's extremely easy to operate, has plenty of power, and it has really increased our efficiency We've had the Kramer over a year and a half, and we've had no problems on the machine, not one service call at all "

Ed Leo is a partner in John C. Leo & Son, a mushroom growing operation in southern Chester County.

HYDROSTATIC TRANSMISSION & ENGINE REBUILDING

Attention:

Kinze/John Deere Planter & No-Till Drill Owners

Did you know that those old cast iron closing wheels can be reconditioned to "like-new" performance for a fraction of replacement cost? Now is the time to get ready for tough planting conditions like sod and dry,hard soil. We can help your older planter or drill to close those seed trenches properly. (See illustration)

Want to sharpen your planting skills?

Benefits include:

- ✔ Less closing pressure
- ✔ More uniform germination
- ✔ Improved stand population
- ✔ Increased yields

NGSP Announces Winners

LUBBOCK, Texas — The National Grain Sorghum Producers (NGSP) has announced the winners of the 2001 National Grain Sorghum Yield and Management Contest.

The contest entries "reflect the expertise, diligence, and management skills our members apply to their livelihoods," said Ken Rose, NGSP Yield and Management Contest chairman from Keyes, Okla. National first-, second-, and third-place winners as well as state winners were recognized at an awards banquet during the 2002 Grain Sorghum Industry Conference in the San Francisco Bay Area in February.

Winners of the contest, which includes five divisions, are determined by the amount a contestant's yield exceeds the five-year average yield in that contestant's county as determined by the USDA's National Ag Statistics Service.

Special food-grade sorghum award winner in nonirrigated categories is Duane L. Vorderstrasse of Thayer County, Neb. His field of Producers Hybrids 79 yielded 143.72 bushels per acre, outpacing the county average by 59.62 bushels.

Among irrigated categories, special food-grade sorghum award winner was Long Family Partnership of Texas County, Okla. Their field of Asgrow Eclipse yielded 124.85 bushels per acre, beating the county average yield by 49.45 bushels.

B & M Farms (Roberts Living Trust) of Hockley County, Texas, walked away with national first place honors in the conventional-till, irrigated division with a yield of 165.94 bushels per acre on their field of Asgrow 581, topping the five-year county average by 108.24 bushels.

First place nationally in the conventional-till, nonirrigated division went to Lawrence Farm of Bond County, Ill. Their field of Pioneer 84G62 turned out a yield of 164.72 bushels per acre, exceeding the county average by 75.32 bushels.

Placing first nationally in the no-till, nonirrigated division was Jon William Hardwick of Tensas County, La. Hardwick's yield of 166.96 bushels per acre on his field of Asgrow Missile topped the five-year county average by 88.96 bushels.

Mark and Ron Clancy Farms of Texas County, Okla., took the first place national award in the reduced-till, irrigated division, with a yield of 163.54 bushels per acre on their field of Pioneer 84G62. That compares to the five-year county average of 75.4 bushels per acre.

National second place honors in the conventional-till, irrigated division went to Ron Smith Farms, Inc. of Jasper County, Mo. Their field of Pioneer 84G62 turned out a yield of 159.42 bushels per acre. topping the county average by 77.22 bushels.

In the conventional-till, nonirrigated division, Hundley Brothers Farms of Acadia County, La., placed second nationally, with their field of Pioneer 83G66 producing 129.03 bushels per acre. That tops the county average by 74.53 bushels.

Second place honors nationally in the mulch-till, nonirrigated division went to Jerry Guenther, of Wilson County, Kan. Guenther's field of Pioneer 84G62 turned out 159.10 bushels per acre, topping the county average by 76.90 bushels.

Effenbeck Farms, Inc. of Thayer County, Neb., took national second place honors in the no-till, nonirrigated division with their field of NC° 7B47. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Corrugated box users and/or people looking for a business opportunity

We have for sale a used Rite Size box making machine which is used by companies who use several different size boxes and companies who manufacture boxes in short-run quantities (under 1000) for resale The machine is fed a corrugated board and in one pass cuts the flaps, creases the folds, cuts slots, slits to width and cuts to length. With a printer attachment, it prints single color The board then only has to be taped, glued, or stitched to complete the box. The main feature of this machine is that it was designed for short runs of approximately 1000 and its 90 second set-up time for size changes These machines are in place the world over in big box plants who use them for their small jobs, government installations, and companies who serve the small order market exclusively There are various combinations of length, width, and depth which could be produced from a board 36" wide x 110" length The space needed for operation is 37 ft x 13 ft The machine is 8 ft wide x 17 ft long Our price is $10,000 These machines usually sell for $15-25,000 New they cost approximately $85,000 There are very few companies set up to sell short run boxes in the Lancaster Farming area. It would, therefore, be a great business to get into If you are buying boxes, you would only have to buy the corrugated board and make boxes as needed For additional information, call Henry Vincent at 610-286-1655. Ray and Debbie Detweiler beside new calf barn, part of a complete renovation to their dairy operation last year. Debbie is in charge of the calf care, which includes feeding Purina milk replacer and calf starter.

Purina Is Key Ingredient In Rejuvenated Detweiler Dairy

PERKASIE (Bucks Co.) — Ray and Debbie Detweiler knew it was time to make some changes.

Two years ago, they were milking more than 60 Holsteins in a 30-stall barn and feeding unmixed grain and forages.

"We were at the point where it was either get out or change," said Ray, a fourth generation farmer on the Detweiler Farm.

They extended the barn to 80 comfort stalls, installed a TMR mixer, and called Purina.

Operating under the renovated setup since February 2001, the rolling herd average has increased from 22,159 to 27,036 pounds of milk in a year's time. Butterfat average is 896 pounds with protein at 830. None of the cows receive BST hormone.

"Every month we just kept climbing," Ray said. "The cows just never milked like this before."

Purina representative Kevin Guldin has played a major part in that success, according to Ray.

Guldin visits the farm once a week to check on the feeding program and fine tune the rations. With the cows performing better than expected after the transition, the adjustments are relatively minor.

"A lot of it is communication," Guldin said, "We put our heads together and figure out what we're going to do. We keep it simple."

Even though "Ray is fussy" when it comes to cows, hired workers can easily mix the feed accurately, Guldin said.

The Detweiler's home-grown haylage, corn silage, roasted soybeans, and baled hay, along with Purina 40-percent concentrate and Purina minerals make up the TMR.

"We get consistent feed from Purina," Ray said.

Because of the rapid climb in milk production, and with 22 of the 80-cow herd milking more than 100 pounds, Guldin said he and the Detweilers might appear unusually smart.

"We're not rocket scientists," he said. "But we're looking like it."

Grafting Yields A Spectrum Of Varieties For Orchard Grower

Eric Habegger, Akron, grows a large variety of fruit trees on his one-acre orchard. In the past few years he has introduced the "Espalier" method of pruning and training trees, which trains the trees flat against a wall or framework. These trees still produce abundant amounts of fruit but are easier to care for.

AKRON (Lancaster Co.) — Variety is the spice of Eric Habegger's life.

Several varieties — no, hundreds of varieties of produce spring to life in his backyard orchard each year.

A Switzerland native, Habegger has been in the U.S. for 48 years, but still looks back to the small farm where he grew up

Cultivars Provide Glimpse Into Disease Management

ANDY ANDREWS

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Research on blueberry disease management is focusing on cultivar selection, with work under way to breed cultivators more likely to have disease resistance, according to one USDA-ARS research geneticist.

Mark Ehlenfeldt, of the USDA-ARS Marucci Center for Blueberry and Cranberry Research and Extension Center in Chatsworth, N.J., spoke in mid-January at the New Jersey Vegetable Growers Meeting at the Taj

Want To Grow A Bigger, Better Peach? Convention Examines Ways

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — How does a grower produce a bigger, better peach?

Researchers noted how at the annual Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in late January at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

First, select the right tree fruit genetics — it can make a big difference, according to Dr. Richard Marini, tree fruit researcher at Virginia Tech.

Marini, who provided the first-ever Ernie Christ Memorial Lecture in honor of a world-known researcher at the convention, also noted that pruning can also improve fruit size. "Trees pruned more severely have bigger fruit," said Marini.

"One of the ways to get bigger fruit is to do a better job of pruning," he said. "It's easier to cut off the flowers or buds with shears than to go and remove the fruit by hand."

And keep water available at the right times, especially in the early stages of growth and the last stages of development.

Marini pointed to research in various places, mostly in Texas, that pointed out, during sunny conditions in season, "each tree uses about 37 gallons of water per day," he said.

Tomato Growers: 50 Tons Per Acre May Be Within Reach

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Tomato growers gathered here during the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in late January and were rewarded for their efforts.

The annual Tomato Awards Luncheon at the convention allowed growers to "talk to each other and adopt methods for their own operations," noted James Kohl, vice president of Furman Foods. "This provides recognition to those high-yielders."

But Kohl noted that, ever so slowly, producers are inching toward that goal of 50-tons-per-acre yield.

Kohl held up the $100 bill, the Ben Franklin, he said, that would be, he promised, given to the grower that reaches that average. "It's going to happen," said Kohl.

Eric Charles, Lancaster, came close this year, winning recognition for having a 49.22-ton-per-acre average. So close. "At least I'll keep the Franklin another year," Kohl said.

The Master Grower Award for 2002 was presented to Clyde Kreider, Washington Boro. The Industry Recognition Award was presented by Kohl to John Everett, Allenwood.

Grafting Yields A Spectrum

"I was always interested in fruit growing — I always had a certain fascination for it," he said.

"I grew up on small farm with a few old apple trees. My dad did some grafting, but not much pruning or spraying," he said. These extra measures, essential in the eastern U.S., are not as necessary in Switzerland because the high elevation and rigorous winters work to decrease disease and insect problems.

Consequently, much of Habegger's expertise has come through reading up on the topic and through his own experimentation and experience. "I planted some trees and began reading up," he said.

He also became a member of North American Fruit Explorer (NAFE), which produces a quarterly newsletter where amateur fruit growers share their experiences.

Habegger and his wife, Gertrude, own approximately an acre where they grow apples, pears, peaches, plums, apricots, raspberries, gooseberries, blueberries, grapes, and currants, plus a small garden and flower beds.

Cheesemaker Apprenticeship

In Europe, Habegger completed an apprenticeship as a cheesemaker. In the U.S. he worked several jobs, but made a career out of the custom kitchen business, where he worked for 29 years.

Gertrude grew up in a family displaced by the war. Families in Ephrata who wanted to sponsor a familiy displaced by war brought her parents over in 1951 and the Habbegers followed in 1953.

In 1968 the couple moved to their home in Akron. In the spring of 1969 Habegger planted his first few trees, "and he's been planting ever since," said Gertrude.

"When we bought the lot, I did not think that it would amount to what it has," he said.

"I planted three apple, two sour cherry, and two pear trees, and every year added on until the whole lot was planted with fruit trees," he said. The large rolling hill that constitutes much of their backyard is ideal for raising fruit, since the area cannot be used for much else, said Habegger.

Now the orchard has increased to 88 trees. The majority, 50, are apple trees.

"I probably have 140 varieties of apples," he said. Although he has trees hosting one or two varieties, "I may have 10 varieties on one tree, made possible by grafting," he said. "I wanted to taste a lot of different apples."

In view of the 100,000-200,000 varieties of apples in the world, however, Habegger has his work cut out for him.

Pear trees are next in abundance in his yard, with nine trees hosting 13 varieties. Five peach trees with eight varieties, plus plums and apricots, which hang from the same tree, are also on the hill.

Plums and apricots, explained Habbeger, are from the same family and are compatible for grafting.

"The more you work, the more you get information and connect with people and places that give you ideas," he said. Certain varieties of pears have been grafted into quince trees, for example, to create a smaller, more manageable pear tree.

Metal tags on the tree, hanging like Christmas ornaments from the branches, designate the grafted limbs to help Habegger keep track of the varieties produced.

Apple History

Apples, which are native of the Middle East, probably Iran, were brought to Europe by the crusaders, according to Habegger. "There are varieties that originated in America, but it is not a native American fruit," he said.

The popular Smokehouse apple, for example, originated in Lancaster County, said Habegger. Near Quarryville an unnamed apple tree was located near the smokehouse, from whence came its name of the apple which grew from the tree.

The new variety probably sprung from the seed of a discarded apple core.

"Every time a seed sprouts, a new tree grows out of it and you get a new variety of apple," he said. "Most fruit trees are cross-pollinated, so seeds bear the chromosomes of two varieties."

The fruit from trees grown from seeds usually are of inferior quality than their parents, but once in a while, one turns out better — that's how you get new varieties.

"That's why we use year-old wood to grow new trees, which is really cloning."

Think "Granny Smith" originated in a quaint north American town? It hails from Australia. In addition the well-known 'Gala" apple comes from the green hills of New Zealand.

The warmer areas of the globe are not the only regions to contribute to orchards, however. Eastern Europe, Russia, and Poland also boast winter-hardy rootstock ideal for northern orchards.

Rootstock

Rootstock is the beginning of life for almost every fruit tree.

Rootstock is created as the mother plant is cut off at ground level. The smaller offshoots are covered in a hill of growing material and develop their own hair-like roots.

When the growing material is washed away, the foot-long "branches," complete with roots, are then cut off. The rootstock is used as rootstock for other, more desirable varieties of apples, which are grafted on. A mother plant could produce these shoots for 20 years, he said.

A graft, the one-year-old scion wood, is then spliced into the rootstock. The inner living cells, the cambium, of both should be in contact so they will properly knit together. The grafting works best if both are equal in diameter. Rootstock, which is usually crabapple, does, to a certain degree, determine how large the tree will be.

Habegger points the grafting wax and area that will yield a new variety of apple with the addition of the grafts.

Tags designating each grafted variety hang from the trees like ornaments.

"A very strong grower should be on a weak rootstock so the results will be a manageable tree," he said. "Many trees today are semidwarf. Growers get the same results — maybe better since they get better care — on smaller trees. These dwarfing rootstocks, however, may need permanent support because of the shallow root systems."

The largest, middle stem, should be allowed to grow while the weaker stems are removed. The single shoot should grow until the highest at which the grower wants branches to start growing. Habegger recommends planting the grafted tree in a garden or growing container for the first year.

"The first summer, keep watering it, that's the most important thing you can do," he said, adding that a stake may also be needed.

Pruning

Besides grafting, Habegger is also familiar with pruning. Many growers prune in March while the plants are dormant. When they are getting ready to produce, he said, "the bigger branches ride down on the lower branches and pruning would knock off the buds," he said. "If they were dormant, it wouldn't do damage."

He prunes his own orchards in the fall, when he can still see the leaves and "get an idea how dense the tree is," he said.

"If the tree has grown two inches, cut off one-fourth of the new growth," he said. On a young, newly-grafted tree, growers should prune the branch on a bud facing up so the main branches will grow to the 11 and 2 o'clock positions.

Later, however, the branches should be trimmed so they reach horizontally outward.

"The best fruit is on the horizontal, or 'fruiting branches," he said. The horizontal branches receive more sunlight than the fruit on the vertical branches. "If the branches are vertical, they're not going to bear fruit, they'll just grow higher and higher," he said.

Spraying six times during the growing season yields the healthy, insect-free fruit that the Habeggers harvest. The first "pink spray" is applied "as the buds show color a bit," he said. The pink spray and the ensuing post-blossom spray are the two most important spray applications.

"After that I spray two times a month until July," he said. He mixes his own insecticide and fungicide, but a small orchard grower may want to purchase a premixed fruit tree spray from a garden center, recommended Habegger. He may use 45 gallons of water mixture for one application.

"Don't spray insecticide during blooming," he said. "You'll spray the bees, and they are your workers."

Grafting Yields

Espalier Design

Habegger's own orchard looks like a study in orchard bonsai art. He takes his cue from Europe, where, to shield the trees from the cooler climate, growers plant their trees on the south side of buildings or walls.

This has brought about the "Espalier" technique, which results in a two-dimensional tree that is carefully trained into two horizontal U's. Care of these trees is easier, since the branches are within easy reach, and takes less spray, since it is two-dimensional. The trees are planted on dwarf rootstock.

In choosing varieties to grow, Habbeger looks for, of course, variety. "I try to have summer, fall, and winter apples. You can really extend the season." The Habeggers, in fact, enjoy the apples stored in their basement throughout the winter and into the spring months.

As the season progresses into September, which Habegger said is the biggest month for apples, the fruits tend to get sweeter. "After it gets into the fall, we don't add sugar, since the apples are sweet enough," he said.

Because of the abundance of small and large, green and red, pink and yellow or any combination thereof, "we've never had pure applesauce," he said.

Jellies, applesauce, pies, and simple fresh fruits are commonplace on the Habegger's table. The couple does not market the fruit but shares with their family and friends.

To share his knowledge, Habegger volunteers at the nearby Landis Valley Museum, where he helps with the grafting and pruning seminars, along with working on the museum's heirloom seed project.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's 2001 commercial apple production is estimated at 480 million pounds, up one percent from last year's crop, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service. The value of the apple production (based on first utilization) was set at $82 million.

The 2001 peach crop totaled 75 million pounds, up 25 percent from the 2000 peach crop. The value of utilized peach production was set at $24.8 million.

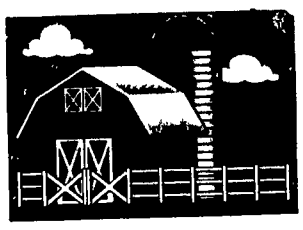
Pear production in the state totaled 5,500 tons for the year, up 900 tons from the previous year. Utilized production of 5,200 tons was valued at $3.0 million.

Sweet cherry production in 2001 was 580 tons, up 16 percent from 2000. Utilized production of 580 tons was valued at $1.3 million.

The State's tart cherry crop decreased in 2001, from 6.1 to 3.9 million pounds. The 2001 price and value estimates will be published on July 8. Last year's grape production of 61,500 tons was down two percent from 2000 production. Utilized production of 61,500 tons was valued at $16.9 million.

Nationally, the 2001 utilized apple crop totaled 9.21 billion pounds, down 11 percent from 2000. Washington state — the leading producer — reported 5 billion pounds, down 17 percent from the previous year.

Utilized U.S. production of other fruit crops and the percentage change from 2000 were peaches, 2.34 billion pounds, down seven percent; pears, 968,300 tons, up two percent; sweet cherries, 219,440 tons, up eight percent; tart cherries, 308.1 million pounds, up nine percent; and grapes, 6.5 million tons, down 15 percent.



USDA Announces Crop Insurance Deadline

RALEIGH, N.C. — Pennsylvania farmers are reminded that the final date to apply for crop insurance on most spring-planted crops for the 2002 crop year is March 15, 2002, according to the Raleigh Regional Office, USDA Risk Management Agency.

Current policyholders likewise have until March 15 to make any changes to their existing contracts.

As a result of significant premium subsidy increases in 2000, crop insurance is now more cost effective than ever before, especially at the higher levels of coverage. Crop insurance provides protection against losses in crop production because of natural perils such as drought, hail, or excessive moisture.

In addition, new revenue products such as Crop Revenue Coverage and Indexed Income Protection are also available, providing additional protection against declining grain prices at harvest.

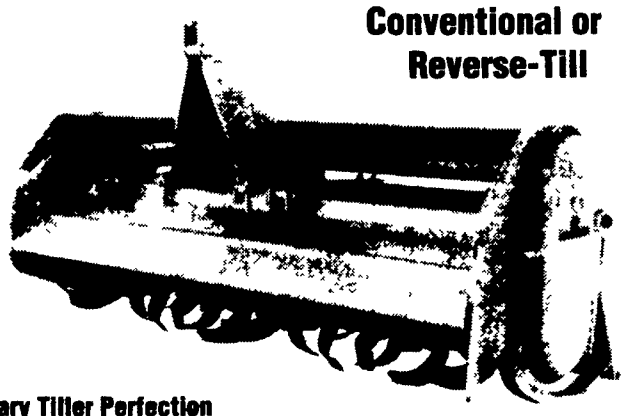
20 Series Rotary Tillers

Conventional or Reverse-Till



Rotary Tiller Perfection
Land Pride's continued strong hold on the Rotary Tiller market continues with the introduction of the 20 Series line of tractor mounted Tillers Available in three widths, this eye appealing Rotary tiller effortlessly turns up hard packed ground, leaving a perfect seedbed for gardens to grass

Forward or Reverse Tilling
Various conditions can demand various tilling methods Land Pride's RTA20 Series Rotary Tillers are available with a forward rotating tilling action The forward rotating tiller can work in all types of ground conditions, with best results being obtained in fairly mellow conditions

The RTR20 Series Rotary Tillers feature a reverse tilling action for tougher ground conditions Able to perform superbly in all types of soil or ground cover, the reverse rotation of the tiller tines tackle tough ground with ease The reverse action 'sucks' the tiller into the ground, which prohibits the tiller from 'walking' on hard ground

The RTR20 Series Tiller also incorporates spring loaded 'shifting' rods behind the tines to help bury large rocks and debris The reverse action of the rotor brings material up and over the top Rocks and vegetation cannot get through the sifting rods so they fall first Soil continues to get sifted before it falls, building a layer of large to small dirt clods burying the rocks and vegetation Reverse tilling can reduce the number of trips needed to turn the soil over!

When Guil Waddell isn't using his AGCO ST45 compact tractor to mow grass or haul round bales on his 25-acre horse ranch, he's putting it to work as owner of GTW Landscaping in Rougemont, NC

"With the price of gas the way it is, I don't want to be towing a 5,000- to 7,000-pound tractor around on a trailer," he says. "That's one reason I like the AGCO compact so well. It has enough power and weight to handle heavy 3-point hitch implements; yet it's light enough to haul around on the job."

With an engine horsepower rating of 44.1 and shipping weight of more than 3,700 pounds, the ST45 is the heavyweight powerhouse of compact tractors. To learn more about the productivity, reliability and operator comfort that only an AGCO ST series tractors can provide, stop by and see us today.

Want To Grow A Bigger, Better Peach?

Peaches, noted Marini, are "not only more difficult to grow than apples, but they are tough to do research on." But consumers want larger (up to 3 inches diameter) and more red fruit. So later varieties are better (early season are usually small), and looking at proper genetics could be key.

There are three different stages of growth. Stage 1, lasting about 50 days, is due to cell division. Stage 2, at six weeks or more, growth halts for a time. But the last six weeks, at Stage 3, the actual cells in the fruit tissue grow very rapidly, and water is critical at this point.

Also, longer shoots make a bigger fruit. To improve fruit size and quality, noted Marini, growers should ensure more leaves are in the vicinity of the fruit to more readily supply the peach with carbohydrates.

Increasing tree population per acre helps with overall yield, but fruit size begins to drop. This is caused by competition for nutrients, water, and light. Intensive planting requires heavy thinning to ensure fruit size improvements.

A good way to check for appropriate nutrients is to do leaf tests. The best fruits can come by way of high nitrogen levels in the leaves (3 percent), and potassium levels of 1 percent.

Irrigation is critical at stages 1 and 3, more than stage 2. Most of the growth in stage 2 goes into the shoots.

Marini offered up these hints:

- Select variety of fruit for their season. Later season provides improved fruit size.
- Adjust soil pH and fertility through soil testing before planting.
- Plan for irrigation some years, at least during a dry season.
- Plan pruning and thinning strategies, especially for intensive plantings.

In the prebloom stage:

- Prune trees to remove short shoots (less than 12 inches long).
- Reduce shoots and thin to 4 per shoot.
- Use a fertilization program based on leaf analysis.
- Apply half the nitrogen a month before bloom, and the remainder at shuck split.

Bloom stage:

- Partially thin flowers.
- Reduce number of flowers (remove 50 percent of blossoms physically).

In Stage 1, early season, complete thinning before pit hardening and retain only largest fruit.

For Stage 2, retain fewer fruits on shoots. Keep leafy shoots.

For Stage 3, irrigation is most important. Marini noted it is important to mow grasses or kill weeds. For improved color and taste, delay the harvest for as long as you can. Wait 2-3 days extra before harvest for maximum fruit quality.

The most critical time to capture peach quality could be four weeks after flowering, when cell division occurs, which could perhaps have the "strongest effect on size," said Dr. Robert Belding, Rutgers Cooperative Extension. "The first four weeks of growth, you need as much energy going into the fruit as you can."

For pure economics, growers would do better, at less cost and more profitability, to provide fruit at 2¼ inches to 3-inch size per fruit per box than smaller.

Also, for improved yield efficiency, the size of the peach tree trunk matters. It is directly proportional to the yield, said Belding.

A typical peach tree will have 4,000-5,000 flowers per tree, with a 2,000 fruit set. But that needs to be thinned to 400-500 fruit to ensure quality and larger peaches. The target should be one fruit every 6 inches on the shoots, he noted.

Also, Belding pointed out that it is critical to irrigate the crop 4-6 weeks before harvest, at the critical Stage 3 development.

Henry Frecon, who operates an orchard with 36 acres of peaches and nectarines in southeast Berks County (80-85 percent wholesale market), near Boyertown, told those at the convention, "I like to get high on peaches — meaning high quality, high color. The redder the better, no blemishes, high sugars (like the White Ladies variety)," he said. "The consumer is used to higher quality, higher color, and higher size (such as the Bounty variety)."

Frecon spoke about how important it is to use a field hydrocooler to ensure quality peaches reach the consumer.

"I will market peaches any way the consumer would like to buy them," Frecon said.

Pennsylvania has the second most number of members of the National Peach Council, trailing only California, according to John Lott, National Peach Council president.

A producer panel looked toward ways to market high-quality peaches. From left, Eric Oesterling, panel moderator; Ed Gevena, Swedesboro, N.J.; Henry Frecon, Boyertown; and Brooks Way, Port Matilda.

Dr. Robert Belding, Rutgers, provides information on peach growing at the convention.

Dr. Richard Marini, Virginia Tech, answers questions about peach growing at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in Hershey.

Cultivars Provide Glimpse

Mahal in Atlantic City, N.J.

Cultivars are being examined for ways to control mummy berry blight, mummy berry fruit rot, anthracnose fruit rot, and other diseases. The goal: to rank the cultivars relative from best to poor resistance.

One yariety of blueberries, Brigitta, seems to resist these types of diseases to a large degree. A database will begin to examine these rankings of a variety of cultivars and chart them for growers.

Mark Ehlenfeldt

The database will show what cultivars work well in certain management situations and help in the movement to growing blueberries organically.

Also at the meeting, tomato disease management was under discussion.

Stephen M. Olson, specialist in vegetable crops, University of Florida, noted that the increased use of ammoniacal nitrogen could increase tomato end rot. End rot can also be caused by an overfertilization of calcium or too much magnesium.

Olson noted growers should be aware of the following tomato diseases:

- One is caused by feeding of nymphs of silverleaf whitefly. Control is possible by using soil insecticides.
- Thrips injury and tomato spotted wilt virus. With this disease, the bottom half of fruit is filled with scattershot-like holes on the fruit, with dimples on the surface of the tomato. This can quickly downgrade the fruit from Number 1 to 2. It takes diligent scouting and spraying to control this disease.
- Catfacing. This is similar to blossom end rot, but cool temperatures cause this.
- Zippering. This looks like a mild type of catfacing. This could be the blossom sticking on the side of the fruit.
- Tomato little leaf. High pH, soil temperatures, and moisture effect the root system.
- Blossom end rot. Applying calcium helps if soil test calls for it. But excess calcium over soil requirements isn't a good treatment. It can also be caused by too-high nitrogen rates, which causes excess vegetative growth, allowing leaves the first use of calcium for the plants.

Stephen M. Olson

Wesley Kline

Other tomato diseases under examination include greywall or blotchy ripening (excessively cool, cloudy periods) or blotchy ripening, internal white tissue (high temperatures during day), cracking (excess water), rain check, puffiness, sunscald (high temperatures), pox and fleck, and zebra stripe.

Also at the meeting, Wesley Kline, Cumberland County ag agent, spoke about a statewide project to look at high tunnels and temperature structures for early production using some Penn State research.

Pennsylvania Produce Consolidation, Distribution Center

Michael R. Blume
VF Express, LLC
Harrisburg

The Proposal

With support from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, VF Express, LLC will establish a Pennsylvania Produce Consolidation and Distribution Center (PPCDC).

Local growers will deliver graded and packed produce to Verdelli Farms in Harrisburg, where it will be cooled and delivered to retailers, wholesalers, and food service companies throughout the state of Pennsylvania and neighboring States.

VF Express will be the entity to operate the PPCDC providing farmers, retailers, wholesalers and food service companies an easier and more efficient way to promote and sell more Pennsylvania produce. This program will also provide farmers a means to properly cool their product through a vacuum cooling system.

A pilot program has been approved for the summer of 2002 VF Express will lease a vacuum cooling system for the duration of eight weeks (June 30-August 24). A grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is being sought to help underwrite a portion of the cost of the vacuum-cooling system. The unit will be placed at Verdelli Farms in Harrisburg.

The Verdelli Team

Verdelli Farms, Inc., the largest produce processor on the East Coast, formed two new companies during the past year. VF Transportation, LLC and VF Express, LLC were formed to provide more value to Verdelli's current customers and to further their strong presence on the East Coast. VF Transportation provides transportation needs to Verdelli and non-Verdelli customers alike, from Maine to Florida. VF Express is a "forward distribution" company assisting shippers and growers in providing retailers, wholesalers, and food service companies an efficient and more effective way of obtaining fresh produce daily.

Commonwealth Of Pennsylvania

The state of Pennsylvania is the number one state in the nation for farmland preservation. By supporting the next generation of farmers, Pennsylvania should maintain its strong hold on farmland preservation.

Now in its fourth season, the "Simply Delicious" Pennsylvania Produce promotion is stronger than ever.

More than 600 Pennsylvania farmers are supporting this promotion. With 800 retail supermarkets and many more food service companies operating in Pennsylvania, the need to continue promoting Pennsylvania produce exists.

PPCDC Goals

The PPCDC will continue to build the awareness of Pennsylvania produce. By assisting farmers in cooling, selling and delivering their crops, and by providing retailers, wholesalers, and food service companies an efficient and effective way to purchase and receive properly cooled Pennsylvania produce, support will increase. With increased support, awareness will grow.

Through the PPCDC, VF Express will work diligently in returning the farmers fair and equitable returns for their crops. The PPCDC will also work in creating a demand for Pennsylvania produce in neighboring states. These goals will help assist the State in retaining their status on farmland preservation.

Marketing Options For 2002

The pilot program will begin on June 30 and conclude on Aug. 24. VF Express encourages all farmers to partake in this year's pilot program. A successful program will be a determining factor in the growth for the following season. VF Express will provide all farmers three marketing options to benefit from this year's pilot program.

- Option 1: Selected interested farmers will release their Corn to VF Express on consignment. VF Express will sell the corn returning the farmers 80 percent of the sale price. VF Express will retain 20 percent of the sale price to cover administrative costs, warehousing costs, transportation costs, cooling costs, and selling fees.
- Option 2: VF Express will facilitate the cooling of the farmer's product at a rate of $20 per pallet. Fee includes administrative costs, warehousing costs and cooling costs.
- Option 3: VF Express will facilitate the cooling of the farmer's product, then deliver the product to their customer(s) in Pennsylvania. A fee of $85 per pallet will be charged to cover administrative costs, warehousing costs, transportation costs, and cooling costs.

Receiving, Cooling Schedules

All products are to be delivered to Verdelli Farms, 7505 Grayson Road, Harrisburg, by appointment only. Delivery and Cooling appointments must be made the day prior (or earlier) by calling VF Express. Farmers requesting their products to be cooled and delivered, will have their products delivered to their customer(s) on the day after the product is received (unless otherwise stated at time appointment is scheduled). Cooling cycle runs 30 minutes for six pallets. Appointments will be honored on first call basis or on the retailers' product demands.

Contacts

For more information, or to schedule appointments, please contact VF Express, LLC:

From Proceedings Of The 2002 Mid-Atlantic Fruit And Vegetable Convention

UD Hires Extension Irrigation Specialist

NEWARK, Del. — Agricultural engineer Ian McCann has been hired by the University of Delaware as cooperative extension specialist for irrigation and water management.

His appointment is 60 percent extension and 40 percent research through the department of bioresources engineering in the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

Based at the Research and Education Center in Georgetown, McCann will oversee irrigation for Delaware production agriculture, which because of hot summers and inconsistent rainfall relies heavily on piped-in water.

"In general, I will conduct applied research and develop extension programs to benefit farmers and the related industries involved in irrigated agriculture," said McCann. "I also will take on environmental challenges of water and soil resources in the state.

"I plan to gauge on-farm irrigation efficiency, measuring irrigation uniformity, actual irrigation amount applied during the season, crop production, and crop water requirements from meteorological data. In addition, I will investigate soil water content and its movement within and below the root zone."

Born in England, McCann grew up in Kenya and Jamaica. He has a bachelor's degree in environmental sciences from the University of East Anglia in Norfolk, England, and a master's degree in agricultural engineering from the National College of Agricultural Engineering in Bedfordshire, England. He earned a doctorate in agricultural engineering from Texas A&M University.

McCann has worked at the University of Idaho, been a consultant in Oman, and was the department head of bioresources engineering at Sultan Qaboos University. He also worked for the International Center for Agricultural Research in Dry Areas, where he was irrigation and water management specialist for the Arabian Peninsula Regional Program.

Insect's Sweet Tooth Troublesome For Fruit Growers

WOOSTER, Ohio — It isn't enough that homeowners must battle to keep the multicolored Asian lady beetle out of their homes, now Ohio fruit growers must contend with another one of the insect's behavioral quirks: an insatiable appetite for sugar.

Ohio State University entomologists have documented large numbers of Asian lady beetles feeding on peaches, grapes and apples, but whether the damage found on the crops is caused primarily by the insect, or by another host has yet to be determined.

"We've heard from field reports that 25 percent of some of the peach crop was damaged this season due to something nibbling on the fruit. Originally we thought it might be grasshoppers," said Kovach. "Then we started finding large numbers of lady beetles aggregating on damaged and undamaged fruit and are questioning whether they could do this type of damage."

The multicolored Asian lady beetle, though considered a pest because it tends to hone in on homes as overwintering sites, does have beneficial characteristics in that it feeds on aphids, scale insects and other agricultural pests. Its diet restriction of insects, however, is what makes the lady beetle's craving for nectar rather unusual.

"There is some unique behavioral shift going on that we don't understand yet that is causing the lady beetle to change its feeding preferences," said Kovach. "Between about September 1st and October when it heads off to find overwintering sites, there is a drop-off in aphid feeding and the insect's attraction to black light traps. They are interested in neither and seem to be going for the fruit."

If researchers' speculations hold true, the news won't bode well for fruit growers. "Peaches and grapes are at a greater risk because their soft skin is easily damaged," said Kovach. "In grapes, it could really be a problem because people are detecting the chemical smell from the beetles in wine."

The short time window that the lady beetles aggregate on the fruit is also a dilemma for growers who spray their orchards. "There are restrictions on certain pesticides that require one to wait several days after spraying before the fruit can be harvested," said Kovach.

Apples, peaches, and grapes rank among the top commodity crops grown in Ohio. According to the 2000 Ohio Department of Agriculture and Ohio Agricultural Statistics annual report, Ohio growers harvested 85 million pounds of apples, valued at nearly $20 million; nine million pounds of peaches, valued at $4 million; and 7,000 tons of grapes, valued at $2.5 million. Apple production in Ohio is ranked 10th in the nation; grape production is ranked eighth; peach production is ranked 18th.

Ohio Raspberry Production Increases

PIKETON, Ohio — Raspberry production is on the rise in Ohio, according to a series of surveys conducted by Ohio State University and Ohio Agricultural Statistics Service researchers.

The surveys, conducted last summer, show that 360 acres of black, summer red and fall red raspberries were harvested in 2001, yielding 303,000 pounds of berries.

The production was an increase over the 1997 Ohio Census of Agriculture report of 245 acres of raspberries, which yielded 291,000 pounds of berries.

"The surveys are a good indicator that interest in growing raspberries in Ohio is steadily increasing," said Sandy Kuhn, berry coordinator of the university's South Centers at Piketon. "But even what farmers are growing in the state may not be enough to meet consumer demand. Raspberries that were provided to a farmer's market in Athens this past summer, for example, sold out in less than 20 minutes."

The series of surveys, which included a preseason survey in June, weekly in-season surveys in July and August, and an end-of-the-season survey in October, were designed to determine how many acres of raspberries are being grown in Ohio, where producers market their crop, what type of raspberry dominates the market, how producers sell their crop and at what price. Kuhn presented the results of the survey and explained what it all means to farmers at the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress and Ohio Roadside Marketing Conference, in February in Toledo, Ohio.

Black raspberries accounted for 63 percent of production, followed by 23 percent of summer red raspberries, and nearly 13 percent of fall red raspberries. Other types of raspberries, such as purple and golden, made up less than one percent of production. Approximately 190 growers were surveyed. Most preferred to sell their berries mainly through pick-your-own operations.

"The biggest result of the surveys that surprised us was the discrepancy in price the growers were charging for berries," said Kuhn. "We found that price was dependent on the type of raspberry sold, the type of market in which the berry was sold in and in what region of the state the sale occurred. It's clear that markets closer to large cities fetched higher prices."

Growers were averaging about $2.04 per pound of raspberries. Purple, golden and red summer raspberries fetched the highest prices on average, ranging from $2.47 to nearly $3.00 a pound. Black and fall red raspberries closed out the group, averaging nearly $2.00 a pound. In pick-your-own operations, growers were averaging $1.56 a pound for their berries, followed by fresh-picked berries at $2.75 a pound and berries sold at farmers markets for $3.25 a pound.

"The next step is to potentially work with some grocery chains to see what needs to be done to give growers a little bit more of a competitive edge. Where are these chains buying their berries, how much are they paying for them and what do they look for in quality?" said Kuhn. "Berries sold at produce auctions and wholesale markets were commanding prices comparable to those sold retail on the farm. That in itself is a strong indicator that there is still room for more berries to be sold through both fresh and wholesale markets."

The sale of raspberries in Ohio totaled more than $615,000 last year. Survey participants indicated they plan to increase their acreage by 15 percent this year. If this is realized, planted acreage will increase to approximately 415 acres.

The Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress and Ohio Roadside Marketing Conference is designed to provide fruit and vegetable growers the latest in research information, food safety and labor regulations, and economic opportunities. The conference is sponsored by Ohio State University, Ohio Vegetable and Potato Growers Association, Ohio Fruit Growers Society, and the Direct Agricultural Marketing Association of Ohio.

Nursery Production Technique Becoming A 'Growing' Trend

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A relatively new landscape and nursery stock production technique that combines conventional field and container practices is finding a successful niche in the industry.

Pot-in-pot (PIP), the technique of growing container trees and shrubs in a holding pot permanently placed in the ground, is an alternative system to field culture, or growing trees and shrubs directly in the soil. Pot-in-pot is becoming very popular but it has some critical issues that need to be considered.

"Pot-in-pot is an increasing trend in the United States," said Hannah Mathers, an Ohio State University nursery and landscape specialist. "Container production is getting to be a bigger deal. On the West Coast, container production represents about 45 percent of nursery production. It's anticipated that container production will continue to grow and eventually pass field production, and pot-in-pot is part of that growth."

Mathers speculates the growing popularity of pot-in-pot production is due in part to the many advantages the technique offers landscape and nursery professionals over field production.

"For one thing a tree can be sold year-round in container production," said Mathers. "If you put a tree in the ground, you basically only have two time periods to lift that tree for sale, spring or fall. But with pot-in-pot, you've got a lot more flexibility with the material."

Trees and shrubs raised in pot-in-pot production also tend to grow faster because the soil-less medium used to grow the plants enables professionals to add additional fertilizer and water, something that can't be done with soils. "What used to take two years in the field could take only one year in a container," said Mathers. "So you can turn more units off that acreage of land, about three times the production versus field culture."

Pot-in-pot production is also more environmentally friendly than field production because it reduces soil mining, a condition where the topsoil is removed with the root balls in conventional field culture.

Research has shown that soil removal due to "mining" has enormous implications to the economic viability of a field nursery. It is estimated that the harvesting of 44-inch diameter balled-and-burlapped stock can result in the loss of 470 tons of soil per acre. This is an average of 94 tons of soil lost per acre over a five-year rotation or 2.8 inches of topsoil lost in five years.

"Of course, pot-in-pot requires relatively permanent modifications to a nursery field that result in soil profile changes," said Mathers. "But if for some reason you reverted a field from pot-in-pot back to conventional culture, the soil levels would be virtually unchanged."

Despite such advantages, however, the biggest drawback in developing a pot-in-pot system is the cost, which can run $30,000-$32,000 an acre. Mathers said drainage and irrigation are the two biggest driving forces behind the high cost. "A drainage line needs to be placed under every row of pots, because whenever you grow a plant in a container, you get what's called perched water, where a certain amount of water in the container never evaporates," she said. "So you need the drainage system to eliminate as much of that water as possible."

Trees and shrubs grown using the pot-in-pot technique may be of higher quality, but Mathers said the market for such quality has to exist for a business to be successful in selling its products.

"One of the disadvantages of pot-in-pot is that trees need to be grown for a certain market size because once they reach that size, they either need to be transplanted to a bigger pot or moved out. So the market has to be there to absorb that constant turnaround," she said. "You also have to have an established clientele that finds quality important and is willing to pay a higher price."

Such a market, however, is one reason Mathers believes pot-in-pot will catch on in Ohio. "Ohio already has a good deal of nursery history and many businesses already deal with established clientele," she said. "Ohio is a shipping hub for nursery stock. One of the main market niches for nurseries is taking stock from the west, growing it, and shipping it to major population centers on the East Coast. Pot-in-pot fits that market really well."

Pot-in-pot production came on the U.S. market in the 1980s and has existed in Ohio for approximately five years.

HERBS: A WAY TO ADD 'FLAVOR' TO YOUR BUSINESS?

You've probably come across the word "diversification" in relation to any type of farming operation these days, whether it is an animal- or plant-based business. The idea is to have more than one source of income for the farm, so that if prices are low in one area, hopefully they will be better in another and overall the farm remains profitable.

Growing and selling fresh produce in Lancaster County is still profitable, but in planning for the future you may want to start considering ways to diversify your business.

Many possibilities exist to diversify and each has its benefits and pitfalls. Before you do make any changes on your farm, I strongly urge you to do some research into the costs and potential returns before you "take the plunge." There is no use in producing a new crop or product if you cannot sell it for a profit!

One potential new crop you may want to consider adding to your operation, especially if you are a small-scale grower or if you are direct marketing your produce, is herbs. Consumers are looking for new flavors in their meals as well as healthy alternatives to traditional foods.

This is creating a demand for a greater variety of herbs, especially fresh materials and organically produced materials. In addition, markets are emerging for certain herbs used by Asian, Latino, or other cultural groups.

If you have an established customer base you may be able to market this new crop to them. In addition, you may be able to develop an entirely new clientele that is not being served by local growers.

What does it take to get started in the herb production business? First and critical to your success is market research. Find out what the needs are, and then research how to produce the crop(s). Producing dried herbs that are readily available from other sources will most likely not be profitable.

What can you do differently to make your product better? Organic production is one possibility. What about developing a relationship with one or more restaurants to supply them with a variety of extremely high-quality fresh herbs for their meals?

A similar relationship could be developed with several specialty grocers. Or how about producing herb plants for retail sales?

Other possibilities include selling at craft shows and festivals, maintaining an herb garden (for display) as part of an entertainment farm, or selling herbs and herbal products at a farmer's market or through a CSA.

A very small but still potential market could be production of very high quality essential oils for the aromatherapy market. However, this would take additional research and most likely expenditures to gain the knowledge and equipment necessary to produce the oils. Examine as many possibilities as you can and then decide what will work for you.

When you decide which herbs you are going to grow, your next step is to research the proper growing conditions for each. Most herbs need full sun, but there are some that will tolerate partial shade. Soil fertility requirements also vary greatly from dry, poor soils to rich, fertile ones. Hopefully your research will also give you expected yields so that you will know how many plants or feet of row you will need to supply your market.

Additional information from your research should be proper harvesting and handling techniques. For fresh use, generally herbs are picked the evening before marketing and cooled quickly to preserve freshness. If you are going to produce dried herbs, be sure to determine the proper harvest time as well as the optimal drying method for each type of herb you will produce. Be aware that they are not all treated the same!

One problem that you may encounter in an herb production operation is pest control. Herbs, being a minor crop, have very few pesticides and herbicides labeled ı use. Fortunately, many he. are relatively pest-free. Producing plants using plasticulture (where possible) will assist with weed control.

In addition, using plastics should help keep soil from splashing onto the herbs, both reducing disease problems as well as improving quality. You will need to be very observant of your herb crop(s) and quickly control insect and disease outbreaks quickly to prevent major crop loss. In addition, you will need to choose control methods carefully during harvest periods, considering both preharvest intervals (PHIs) for applied chemicals as well as the potential for chemical residue that would need to be washed off prior to sale.

Depending upon how you decide to market your herbs, you may want to consider greenhouse production. If you plan on selling to restaurants or specialty grocers, growing in a greenhouse would allow you to extend your harvest season. In addition, by keeping rainfall off the plants, you should also reduce the potential for foliar diseases. However, if you are not familiar with producing a crop in a greenhouse, you will also need to learn the specifics of greenhouse operation as well as herb production! I would urge you to proceed slowly and make small, inexpensive mistakes as opposed to large costly ones.

Production and marketing of herbs can be a challenge for the inexperienced. However, if you are looking to diversify your operation, this crop may be one to consider. The public has interest in this area, so part of your marketing process is already started. While not for everyone, the addition of herbs to your business could prove very profitable.

Central Pa. Vegetable Growers Conference March 12

MILL HALL (Clinton Co.) — Vegetable growers can mark their calendars for the 2002 Central Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Conference in Pleasant Gap, March 12, at Central Pennsylvania Institute of Science and Technology.

This conference is designed to meet the special needs of vegetable growers in central Pennsylvania. Information is specific for the region, climate, crops grown, size of farm operations, and the markets.

Scheduled are eight educational sessions with well-known speakers from Penn State University and regional extension agents of the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service.

If you have ever considered extending your growing season earlier in the spring and later in the fall, a high tunnel production system can achieve that goal.

Dr. Bill Lamont of Penn State University will discuss cropping options in these simple, nonpermanent greenhouse structures and how they can be utilized to expand your growing season.

If pumpkin diseases give you a headache, Dr. Alan MacNab of Penn State University will present information that could help you manage your problems.

Finally, if you have grown sweet corn, you probably have noticed the worms in your ears of corn. Tom Butzler, Clinton County extension agent, will present information about managing worm pests of sweet corn.

Other topics will include weed control in cantaloupes and pumpkins, managing strawberry systems in Pennsylvania, and nutrient management for vegetable production.

Three category and one core pesticide recertification credits will be available.

For more information, contact Tom Butzler, Penn State Cooperative Extension, at (570) 726-0022. A brochure can be located online at http://www.extension.psu.edu/ncregion/hoıt/programs/brochure_veg_conf.pdf.

How To Promote Herb Use

Old Plants: Old Uses, New Markets

Over the past few decades, there has been an increased interest in the use of botanical products for food, flavorings, teas, tonics, medicines, cosmetic products, handycrafts, home gardening, bigbased pest control, cleaning agents and veterinary care products.

Much of this interest can be attributed to a heightened cultural awareness regarding a number of issues. We have recently been alerted to the role of diet in health maintenance and now seek to replace excessive fat, sugar and sodium with new flavors.

There is also new concern for food safety a trend which has paved the way for the once niche organic market to turn mainstream.

Another cultural development influencing our increased use of botanical products is the pharmacological consideration given to undiscovered botanical medicinal compounds. Moreover, the need for the conservation of germplasm and promotion of biodiversity in agriculture is a trend that has recently resurrected the popularity of many heirloom varieties.

Finally, our country's ever-expanding ethnic population and our increasingly inquisitive domestic taste buds have begun to stir a demand for speciality ethnic foods.

As described in the popular book, "Sell What You Sow!" — "No longer satisfied with standard varieties which boast of uniformity and extended shelf life, consumers are seeking the unusual, from 'Hopi Blue Corn' to nasturtiums and borage, Rosalind Creasey in 'Cooking from the (larder' compares this period to 'the time in Europe when explorers were returning from the New World with ships full of potatoes, peppers, chocolate and tomatoes."

Evolution Of Small Farm

In conjunction with these established trends is the increased awareness of the need for the preservation of small farms and the direct, local, and cooperative markets that support them.

Noted agricultural scientist and philosopher Jim Hightower comments about the loss of the family farm and widespread decreased agricultural profits, "I disagree with those who say we have too many farmers, we have too many farmers trying to produce the same things in the same way."

It is imperative that the small farmer capture increased value for their crops, particularly those with greater capital investment in the form of greenhouses or high tunnels where each inch of space must be maximized.

Successful niche growers are those who can identity the need for a product and reliably produce it at a sustained profit.

As Dr. John Ikerd explains, "If you expect someone else to provide you with opportunities, you are destined to be disappointed. If you expect someone else to solve your problems, you will be disappointed. You have to do something creative and productive if you expect the market to reward you for having done it. And, if it is easy to do, it won't be worth much."

Competition, Quality

Despite the economy of scale, smaller farmers are not necessarily disadvantaged in the herbal marketplace. Although competition with corporate farms concentrated in California, Mexico, South America, and Asia is fierce, particularly for the dry herb market, small growers can more readily offer assurance that their crop is of the highest quality and purity. Until recently, organic certification, a label now widely recognized and capable of commanding a premium on the market, was also relegated to the domain of the small and mid sized growers. Some herb buyers even prefer visible imperfections in herb crops, a sign, they intuit, that the crop has not been heavily sprayed with chemicals.

Other benefits of growing herbs to the smaller farmer is that they are often required in smaller volumes, and may be produced with less sophisticated machinery. Many herbs, such as burdock, chicory, and dandelion, are considered commonplace weeds that can be produced on the most marginal of land, although other herbs require far more specialized growing conditions. As a large volume herb broker commented, "There is money to be made by small grower...those kinds of growers don't have to purchase $100,000 tractors, $30,000 sprayers or pesticides and herbicides, they don't have high labor costs, high irrigation costs... They can cater to the organic market where that term still has some meaning, keeping their expenses low and their profits at a very decent level."

The 'Broccoli Wagon'

Herb production pitfalls include having to enter and compete in rather uncertain markets, often subject to overproduction gluts and unexpected shortages, ultimately leading to unstable prices.

Despite the rich historical use of many herbs, they are being sold in a new marketplace and to consumers who are still struggling to catch up to learn about their uses.

As long-time herb grower and researcher Tim Blakley describes it, "A new market often means room for newcomers. It can also mean operating without all the information you might need, and taking a few more risks than you might if you stayed on the broccoli wagon."

The Herbal Renaissance

There are seemingly unlimited forms in which botanical products may be marketed today. Medicinal plant extracts of St. Johns Wort and Echinacea are added to beverages sold at mainstream supermarkets, where special sections now feature selections of medicinal teas, ethnic spices, specialty produce, and an increasing assortment of fresh cut herbs.

Even garden favorites like tomato and carrot are juiced and sold not just for refreshment, but for their phytonutrient contents. Essential oils ranging from lavender, sage, geranium and bergamot are found in products produced by cottage industries and global chemical giants alike.

Without an ingredient list touting natural, herbal additives, even the most commercial soaps and cosmetic products are not competitive in today's herbal renaissance market. Its not just people who are using herbs, pet stores now have products ranging from cat-nip filled toys, essential oil based flea powders, garlic, barely grass, valerian and chamomile tablets, to name just a few selections.

It is no surprise that a Harvard study from the Journal of American Medicine Association found that $5.1 billion was spent on herbal supplements in the U.S. in 1998 alone.

An Herb Is An Herb Is An Herb, Or Is It?

Until recently, herbs were not commercially considered foods, but rather flavorings or spices. With the passing of the DSHEA Act of 1994, many products formerly unclassifiable are now called "dietary supplements." Interestingly, in cultures worldwide, food is commonly thought of as medicine, and medicine is consumed daily in food.

In Thailand, the regular consumption of cayenne peppers is thought to significantly reduce the incidence of stroke and blood clots, while studies worldwide have shown the daily consumption of garlic to effectively decrease the incidence of gastrointestinal cancers. Because many established drugs are derived from botanical sources, the distinction between drug, dietary supplement and food is one of intended use.

Herb Classifications, Characteristics

• Medicinal and nutritive herbs. Commonly sold in a dried or prepared form as a tea, extract preserved in alcohol or glycerine, (often to beverages and foods) topical ointments, tablets, pills or capsules. Medicinal herbs are sold to pharmaceutical companies, nutraceutical companies, or less commonly, directly to the consumer.

• Culinary herbs. Commonly sold dried and with an increasing market for fresh. Sold either directly to the consumer or indirectly via a grocery store or restaurant. Culinary herbs are also processed and shipped for drying and use in large-scale food production.

• Essential oil plants. Many essential oil plants are also medicinal in function; however, oils are prepared through the distillation process. Plants used in oil production are processed fresh. Essential oils are used in aromatherapy and as scents in products ranging from household cleaners, candles, insect repellents, air fresheners, soaps, cosmetics, beverages and some foods.

Phlox 'David' Named 2002 Perennial Plant Of Year

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Phlox "David" has been named the 2002 Perennial Plant of the Year by the Perennial Plant Association.

The Perennial Plant Association (PPA) is an educational and professional trade association. Each year, the PPA membership selects by vote the Perennial Plant of the Year. Phlox "David" landmarks the 13th year for the promotional Perennial Plant of the Year Program.

"Phlox 'David' is praised for its bright white clusters of delightfully fragrant flowers," said Steven Still, PPA executive director. "It is known to flower from mid-July to September. Also, 'David' has the greatest powdery mildew resistance of any white phlox."

Phlox "David," a member of the Polemoniaceae family, is native from New York to Georgia and west to Arkansas and Illinois. The perennial performs well in USDA Hardiness Zones 4 to 9.

"David" is an erect perennial 36-40 inches tall. The thin glossy leaves are opposite with bristly hairs on the margins. The plant has a habit of producing strong stems that prove sturdy in wind and weather. The fragrant white flower panicles are six to nine inches long and six to eight inches wide with one-inch diameter florets.

"The Perennial Plant of the Year Program helps consumers select plants that perennial industry experts find to be outstanding and easily grown," Still said. "The homeowner can have great confidence that the Perennial Plant of the Year will grow well in the garden."

Gardeners can obtain this exciting perennial through their local garden centers or through the many mail order perennial nurseries.

The Perennial Plant of the Year Program began in 1990. The membership of the Perennial Plant Association selects a perennial that is suitable for a wide range of climate types, low maintenance, easily propagated, and exhibits multiseasonal interest.

For more information about the PPA, visit www.perennialplant.org or contact the PPA office.

Multi-State Nursery, Greenhouse Film Recycling Program Announced By N.J.

BORDENTOWN, N.J. — New Jersey's 2002 nursery and greenhouse film collection and recycled program will be held for the sixth year in a row. This year's program has been modified from previous years.

The most significant change is the program has been expanded to include collection of nursery and greenhouse film from out-of-state growers. Participating growers can take their film to two collection sites in Cumberland County, East Coast Recycling in Millville and the Cumberland County Improvement Authority in Deerfield, or the collection site located in Burlington County, the Occupational Training Center in Mt. Holly.

According to S. Howard Davis, executive director of the New Jersey Nursery and Landscape Association, New Jersey's film recycling program "has been extremely effective and a great service to our members." To date, about 1.8 million pounds of film generated by New Jersey growers has been kept out of landfills and recycled for other uses.

Last December, Davis attended an agricultural plastic recycling forum sponsored by Penn State University. Representatives from Canada, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Virginia and Maryland convened in Harrisburg to discuss ways to recycle the various types of plastics generated by agriculture.

New Jersey's representatives received positive feedback from the other state participants about the Garden State's film recycling program and decided New Jersey's program could serve out-of-state growers in close proximity to its state line. The volume of film recycled should increase an estimated 10-15 percent by opening up the program to out-of-state growers. New Jersey will serve as the first multi-state nursery and greenhouse film-recycling program in the nation.

Each film collection site has specific procedures that must be followed when film is transported to the site. In addition, each site has its own collection dates and tipping fees. Any grower, New Jersey or otherwise, interested in recycling their used nursery or greenhouse film should contact the collection site to determine the particular procedures that must be followed.

According to the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection's Bureau of Hazardous Waste Regulations, the vehicles used to transport the greenhouse and nursery film intra or interstate are not required to be licensed by NJDEP so long as the used film is transported directly to one of the three collection sites participating in New Jersey's agricultural film recycling program.

Both white and clear nursery film and clear multi-season (two-year, three-year, and four-year) greenhouse covers can be recycled. Film must be free of lathing, staples, and saran. Loads containing other agricultural plastics such as bags, mulch film, shrink film, stretch film or ground cover film, will be rejected at the collection sites. New Jersey growers have done a tremendous job of maintaining good quality control on the film they recycle. Out-of-state growers must implement the same quality control measures to insure the integrity of New Jersey's film-recycling program.

For additional information on the nursery and greenhouse film-recycling program, growers can contact the New Jersey Nursery and Landscape Association at (609) 291-7070 or Karen Kritz at (609) 984-2506 or e-mail at Karen.Kritz@ag.state.nj.us.

Recycling Program Announced By N.J.

New Jersey Nursery And Greenhouse Film Recycling Program For 2002 Grower Collection And Bundling Guidelines

Growers are encouraged to maintain a quality control program when removing the film and preparing it for storage or delivery to the collection sites. In order to market the film, the collection sites must be able to provide an ample supply of quality material. Grower cooperation is imperative in order to continue the success and future of the program. Below are steps that must be followed for the film-recycling program.

Quality Control

- Film should be cut just above the lathe board in order to insure that no staples or wood is commingled with the film.
- Most collection sites require that the film must be rolled. For ease of handling, the film should be rolled up as soon as it is removed from the structure. The rolled film must be no wider than four to five feet (like a sausage). It may be necessary to cut the length of the film for ease of handling.
- The bundled film must be tied and only the same type of film in the roll should be used to tie it. Do not use twine, wire, non-nursery/greenhouse film, etc. If anything other than nursery/greenhouse film is used to tie the bundled film, the load will be rejected.
- Every step should be taken to avoid picking up excess soil when the film is removed from the structures, rolled, stored or prepared for delivery to the collection site.
- Only nursery and greenhouse film will be accepted at the collection sites. No bags, mulch film, shrink film, stretch film, or ground cover film will be accepted.
- Film must be free of foreign material: lathing, wood, staples, paper, stone, saran tape, etc. The approved collection sites will reject any loads that contain material other than nursery or greenhouse film.

Storing The Film Future Off-Site Recycling

If a grower misses New Jersey's collection period, the rolls of film can be stored until the next collection program is in place. In order to assure that the material will maintain its quality over the winter months, the steps listed below must be followed.

- The rolls cannot be in contact with the soil or placed on stone. They must be stored on a concrete pad or on pallets. Storing the film on soil or stone will increase the chance of soil or stones contaminating the load of film when it is prepared for delivery to the collection site.
- The best place to store the rolls of film is inside a building. However, if an area of a building cannot be designated for this purpose, the material can be stored outside if it is covered. In order to eliminate the accumulation of water in the rolls, they must be covered with some type of tarp or plastic. The film, which is removed from the structures, can be used to cover the rolled film and the covering can then be bundled and tied and recycled when the material is delivered to the collection site. If a tarp or non-greenhouse/nursery film is used to cover the rolls, it must be removed prior to delivery of the rolls of film to the collection site.
- All quality control measures outlined earlier must be followed.

Transportation

- A grower or a commercial contractor may transport film to the collection sites. If a trash dumpster is used to transport the rolls of film, remember that only nursery and greenhouse film is allowed — no other plastic material or refuse. If there are any contaminants in the load, the entire load may be rejected by the collection site.
- A solid waste transport permit from the New Jersey Department of Environmental protection is not required to transport recyclable material to the collection site.

Lancaster-York Heritage Region Agritourism Initiative Begins

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The recently created Lancaster-York Heritage Region is in the process developing a map and guide to farm markets within the region. The purpose of the map and guide is to connect residents and visitors to the area with seasonal farm-fresh produce and value-added products. The project will also help promote farmers who directly market the produce they grow.

The map and guide will include places that consumers can access farm-fresh produce such as historic downtown farmers' markets, farmers' markets, country markets, on-farm markets, producers' markets, on-farm retail outlets, historic mills, community supported agriculture farms (CSAs), and wineries. It will help consumers find locally grown fruits, vegetables, meats, dairy products, eggs, wines, honey, milled grains, grapes, etc.

Another important element of the project is the interpretive information that the guide will provide on the history of growing and producing food in the Lancaster-York region. Among the topics that will be discussed will be the importance of farming to the region, the people that farm the land, the cultural influences of food, and mention of how some area businesses have evolved from small on-farm producers to large international snack food corporations.

The map and guide will be an attractive, full-color piece with photos and a foldout map. A complimentary Webpage is also being developed.

The project is being funded through a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, along with funding from the two county convention and visitors bureaus. The Lancaster County Planning Commission is coordinating the development of the map and guide.

The Lancaster-York Heritage Region is an official Pennsylvania Heritage Park. It was designated by then Lt. Governor Mark Schweiker in August 2001. The mission of the Heritage Parks program is to highlight Pennsylvania's unique industrial heritage to promote tourism and economic development. Agriculture has been one of the State's leading industries for more than 300 years.

A management/action plan prepared for the Lancaster-York Heritage Region proposed five interpretive themes to implement the goals of the State Heritage Parks program in this area. The map and guide to farm-fresh produce is part of the "foodways" theme of the Lancaster-York Heritage Region plan.

If you own, operate, manage, or otherwise know of a farm market that sells seasonal farm-fresh produce in Lancaster or York County that may be a good candidate for the farm-fresh map and guide, please send your name, phone number, name of the market, address, and any other pertinent information to Scott Standish, Deputy Director for Long-Range Planning, Lancaster County Planning Commission, 50 North Duke Street, P.O. Box 83480, Lancaster, PA 17608.

Insect Pest Not So Pesky

WOOSTER, Ohio — The strawberry bud weevil, an insect that feeds on strawberry plants, may not be as much of a concern as once originally thought.

Though labeled a pest because of the considerable damage the insect can do to strawberry plants, entomologists have found that the strawberry bud weevil, commonly known as the clipper, restricts its range along a field's edge, making it easier to control the insect through smaller, more economical pesticide applications.

"Monitoring weevils in unsprayed fields over a three-four year period showed that the insects move only about 8-10 meters (24-32 feet) per year," said Joe Kovach, of Ohio State's Integrated Pest Management Program. "The pest occurs more often on the edge of the field rather than the center, so why spray a whole field if you can effectively control it by just spraying along the border?"

In addition, researchers found that the damage the insect does to a bud may contribute to an increase in the size of the fruit that is produced. The strawberry bud weevil feeds on unopened flower buds, preventing them from developing, and hence producing little or no fruit. Research has shown that this clipping results in bigger fruit size from the remaining buds on the plant.

Kovach, a researcher with the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wooster, Ohio, discussed these latest research findings at the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress and Ohio Roadside Marketing Conference in February in Toledo, Ohio.

"Some fruit, like apples, are compensators. That is, they produce bigger fruit when their buds are removed," said Kovach. "Recent research has shown that strawberry plants do the same thing."

Studies have indicated that if the primary bud is clipped, the secondary bud produces bigger fruit. Additionally, if the secondary bud is clipped, the primary and tertiary buds produce bigger fruit.

"We think it takes a lot of energy to open that flower bud. If a bud is clipped before it opens, then that energy is allocated to other unopened buds, hence producing larger fruit," noted Kovach.

Kovach stated that some strawberry cultivars are better compensators than others. Seneca topped the list of 11 compensating cultivars, with a 44 percent increase in fruit size after clipping the primary bud. Mohawk, Mira and Jewel followed with 20-25 percent increase in fruit size. Other cultivars, such as Lateglow, Earliglow and Cavendish rounded out the list with 10 percent or less increase in fruit size.

"These results tell us that maybe growers should plant strawberries that compensate for clipper injury in border rows of the field, so bigger fruit is produced with minimal yield loss. And then plant non-compensation cultivars in the middle of the field," said Kovach.

Kovach stated that farmers might not have to spray as much on compensating cultivars to control the insect and recommends that farmers wait until at least one clip is present on a primary bud or up to 20 on secondary and tertiary buds in order to continue producing a successful crop.

Consumer Surveys Help Boost Taste Quality Of Pasteurized Cider

WOOSTER, Ohio — Which tastes better: pasteurized or fresh-pressed cider? According to a series of Ohio State University consumer surveys, it's a split decision.

That's promising news for Ohio State researchers who have been working to make cider safer to drink while maintaining its taste quality.

"Half of the consumers surveyed preferred the pasteurized cider because they said it tasted sweet and mellow. Half liked the fresh-pressed cider because it had a tart, fresher taste to it. I suppose it just all depends on what the palate likes," said fruit specialist Joe Scheerens, who works at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center (OARDC) in Wooster, Ohio.

Scheerens and other Ohio State researchers, like horticulturist Diane Miller, conducted cider taste tests on consumers over a three-year period to determine how well pasteurized cider held up to consumer's expectations of what a good cider should taste like. Pasteurization, the process of heating a product to a certain temperature to render bacteria harmless, is becoming a more common sanitation practice in juice production because it kills such food-borne pathogens as E. coli. But research has shown that pasteurization changes the flavor of foods, which may affect their success on the market.

"Data shows that pasteurization does change the quality of cider, but the difference is so slight that it doesn't seem to change the consumer's acceptability of the product," said Scheerens. "What is physically happening we don't know yet, but we hope to find that out this summer in future studies."

Searching for that perfect cider continued with another taste test at the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress and Ohio Roadside Marketing Conference in February in Toledo, Ohio. A consumer panel of judges sampled 19 cider entries from cider processors across Ohio and voted on various characteristics, such as taste and color. In addition, the cider was analyzed for bacteria and mold counts and its overall chemical content.

"The information provided is meant to educate producers about how consumers perceive their product, its relative safety and its physical and chemical characteristics," said Scheerens. "It's a way of maintaining and improving the quality of the product."

According to the Ohio Department of Agriculture, Ohio ranks 10th in the nation in cider production, producing over 10 million gallons per year. Cider production ranks second economically in the state among fruit commodities at roughly $25 million, behind fresh apples, which are estimated at $30 million. Of the three million bushels of apples grown annually in Ohio, up to 40 percent (1.2 million bushels) are used in cider production with a retail value estimated at $15 million. Additionally, apples from out of state are imported annually to Ohio for cider production with an estimated value of $10 million.

Plan Your Soil Sampling Plan

NORCROSS, Ga. — Soil samples are collected to provide a representation of the ability of the soil to supply nutrients to meet crop needs throughout the growing season in sufficient quantities to support the expected yield.

Laboratory analysis data are compared to established calibration curves used by the laboratory to relate the nutrient content of the sample to research results showing expected crop response to similar samples. Sampling patterns and procedures should be selected with these goals in mind.

Calibration curves used to interpret test results are based on a standard sampling depth, usually 6-⅔ inches. This is very important. Use the sampling depth recommended by the laboratory that will do the analysis. Deviation from that depth will invalidate the comparison and the recommendations based on the test results. Under reduced tillage systems commonly used today, sampling depth is even more important. Samples should be a composite of at least 15 cores taken within the area to be represented. They should be as uniform as possible and carefully mixed in a plastic bucket. The sample sent to the laboratory should be taken from that composite.

Sampling patterns should be selected to best represent the field and the planned method of fertilizer application. For fields that will be managed as a uniform unit, samples can be collected at random, with the sampler being careful to cover the entire field in a zig-zag pattern, or following a uniform grid pattern. The number of samples needed, or the area represented by each sample, should be based on the anticipated variability in the field. For Midwest corn-soybean systems, the recommended density is one sample for each 2.5 acres or less — 16 samples in a 40-acre field. More intense sampling is recommended if soil variability is high or where site-specific, variable-rate fertilizer application is to be used. More intense sampling means higher cost for sampling, so a good compromise is to do a 2.5-acre grid, with 10 percent additional samples collected at random to help define the variability.

Access to other geographically referenced (GIS) databases may also help guide sampling decisions. Where more detailed information about the field is available, such as yield monitor maps, remote sensing imagery, digital soil survey or topographic maps, or electrical conductivity data, it can be used to help define nutrient management zones to be used instead of a uniform grid. Zones should be defined in areas of five acres or less, recognizing again that smaller zones generally provide more accurate results, but increase soil testing costs. Collect more than one sample per zone to better define variability within the zone. All sample points should reference with global positioning system (GPS) technology if possible, for better correlation with other GIS data.

How the soil test data will be used will help determine whether the cores making up a sample should be collected throughout the management zone or grid or whether the cores should be taken within a few feet of a specific point. With more emphasis being placed on GIS data sets and variable-rate application, the point sampling approach may provide more interpretation options. In that case, the 15 cores should be taken within five to 10 feet of the sample point, with the geographic location determined by GPS. That allows other data sets to be more specifically related to the soil test data.

Careful attention to soil sampling patterns and techniques helps reach the goal of guiding nutrient management decisions to best meet crop needs and maintain the nutrient supplying power of the soil, while making most efficient use of fertilizer dollars and avoiding environmental problems. Most of the potential errors in using soil testing are made in sampling procedures. Proper sampling greatly enhances the value of soil testing as a management tool. Improper sampling leads to costly errors in nutrient management decisions.

Entrepreneurs Get Online Start-Up Information From Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Got a great new snack food idea? Ready to market Grandma's chicken salad recipe?

People looking to turn family recipes into big-money businesses now have access to valuable information on the food processing business, thanks to a special Web-based service developed by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Resources for Small Food Processors and Potential Entrepreneurs" is a Website created by Luke LaBorde, assistant professor of food science, to introduce budding business tycoons to the fundamentals of food processing technology and regulations.

The site (http://foodsafety.cas.psu.edu/processor/ent—res—text2.htm) is designed to answer the most frequently asked questions surrounding commercial food processing.

"Many people have an old family recipe for a barbecue sauce, salad dressing, or salsa that they think tastes better than what's on the market," LaBorde said. "Our site offers a variety of resources available in Pennsylvania and other states to answer key questions: 'Am I the type of person who would be happy running a business? What are the state and federal regulations I would have to follow, and how can I make sure I will produce a safe product?'"

The links in this Website should help anyone seriously considering starting a food processing operation."

More than 90 online resources have been collected and categorized into sections such as "Before You Get Started — Making the Decision to be a Food Processor," "Resources for Starting a Business,", "Regulations for Food Processors," "General Microbiology and Food Safety," and "Food Processing Technology."

The site also has links to food testing laboratories, equipment and packaging resources, and direct marketing opportunities and farm alternatives.

"By no means will the site answer all your questions — especially when you look at the many different kinds of food products one can make," LaBorde said. "After looking at the site, potential entrepreneurs should contact the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and their local county health department for additional advice on regulations and food safety requirements."

Veneman Names Fruit, Vegetable Industry Advisory Committee Members

ORLANDO, Fla. — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman recently announced the names of the first members chosen to serve on a newly established Fruit and Vegetable Industry Advisory Committee.

Speaking at the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association annual meeting, Veneman said, "This advisory committee will offer valuable advice on issues affecting the fruit and fresh produce industry."

The 23 members appointed by Veneman to the new advisory committee were selected from 179 individuals nominated by their peers in industry. The committee is comprised of seven individuals representing fresh fruit and vegetable growers or shippers, four fresh fruit and vegetable wholesalers, two brokers, two retailers, four fruit and vegetable processors and fresh cut processors, two foodservice suppliers, one trade association representative and one state department of agriculture official. Members will serve a two-year term.

The first meeting has been scheduled for April 16-17 in Washington. Members of the committee will serve without compensation, but with reimbursement of travel expenses and per diem expenses.

During her remarks, Veneman also reiterated the administration's goals for the Farm Bill and pledged quick implementation once a bill is final. In addition, she discussed efforts on homeland security, nutrition programs, trade and advances in technology that are helping the industry.

Further information about the first meeting will be published in the Federal Register and at www.ams.usda.gov/fv Information can also be obtained by emailing robert-.keeney@usda.gov or calling (202) 720-4722.

The Federal Advisory Committee Act of 1972 provides for the establishment and operation of advisory committees within the executive branch of the federal government.

Pa. Potato Stocks Down 18 Percent In Feb.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Total stocks of potatoes stored in Pennsylvania Feb. 1, 2002 were 900,000 CWT, down 18 percent from a year ago, according to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service.

Of this amount, 358,000 CWT were stored in processor's facilities, 40 percent of the total stocks.

Stocks are defined as the quantity (whether sold or not) remaining in storage for all purposes and uses, including shrinkage and waste and other losses that occur after the date of each report. Stocks may also include potatoes produced in other states. Sales of fall potatoes for all purposes for the past five years averaged 90.6 percent of the total fall production. Shrinkage, loss, and home use account for the remaining 9.4 percent. Most seed for use the following year is on hand, but remains as part of stocks until planted.

The 15 major potato states held 202 million CWT of potatoes Feb. 1, 2002, down 14 percent from a year earlier and two percent below the potatoes held in February 2000. Storage accounted for 51 percent of 2001 fall production, same as a year ago. This year's storage held two percent reds, eight percent round whites, three percent long whites, and 87 percent russets, with a higher percentage of russets, but fewer round whites than a year ago.

Disappearance at 192 million CWT is down 14 percent from the 2000 crop and 10 percent below two years ago. This is the lowest disappearance since 1993. January disappearance of 31.7 million CWT is down 23 percent from a year ago and the lowest for this month since January 1993. Shrink and loss to this point in the season is 19.4 million CWT, down 26 percent from last year and 20 percent below two years ago.

New Wholesale Farmers' Markets In Va.

Herman E. Hohlt
Eastern Shore AREC
Painter, Va.

In recent years, the state of Virginia has built three farmers' markets in eastern Virginia. Each has a slightly different situation and organization. They have met with varying degrees of success.

• Eastern Shore — This was the first market built and is in the heart of our wholesale industry. The market is overseen by a group of growers called the Eastern Shore Marketing Cooperative. They hire a market manager to oversee the day to day operation of the market and lease space to brokers who buy, sell, and pack produce. The market has been successful and is currently full and plans for expansion.

• Northern Neck — This was the second market built and is in a small production area. The Northern Neck Vegetable Growers' Association oversees the market. The facilities are leased to a single market operator who sells both his own produce and other growers' vegetables. The facility packages and cools produce for a fee and charges a marketing fee. It is successful and has been a valuable asset to growers in the Northern Neck.

• Southeast Virginia — This is the newest market. The Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services oversees it. It is the least successful of the markets because it was built in an area with no volume of vegetables to support it. It has had difficulty attracting and retaining an operator. This market has operated an open auction for small produce buyers one evening per week with some success.

Flower Chemicals Invite Some Insects, Deter Others

ITHACA, N.Y. — When some insects zero in on a flower for nectar, their ultraviolet vision is guided by a bull's-eye "painted" on the plant by chemical compounds.

Now, chemical ecologists at Cornell University have discovered a second job for these compounds: warding off herbivores.

Even before a flower bud — such as the creeping St. John's wort — opens for business, the same chemicals, called DIPs (for dearomatized isoprenylated phloroglucinols), are both coloring the flower in patterns unrecognizable to the human eye and protecting the plant's reproductive apparatus by killing or deterring caterpillars, the scientists report in the upcoming Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (Vol. 98, No. 24).

"Now that we know where to look, antifeedant chemicals like the DIPs undoubtedly will be found in other plant species, and they offer clues to more natural insect control agents," said Thomas Eisner, Cornell's Schurman Professor of Chemical Ecology and one of six authors of the report. An antifeedant chemical discourages herbivorous insects and can harm those that don't get the message.

One place DIPs are found is in hops, the female flowers of the commercial hop, which give beer its bitter flavor and also protect against pathogenic microorganisms, Eisner said.

Also participating in the Cornell study, which was supported by grants from the National Institutes of Health, were Jerrold Meinwald, the Goldwin Smith Professor of Chemistry; Athula Attygalle, director of the Mass Spectrometry Facility in the Department of Chemistry and Chemical Biology; Mathew Gronquist, graduate student in that department; Alexander Bezzerides, graduate student in the Department of Neurobiology and Behavior; and Maria Eisner, senior research associate in that department, who is Thomas Eisner's wife and research partner.

The DIP finding follows 30-year-old studies by the Eisners of floral "nectar guide" patterns that only creatures with vision in the ultraviolet part of the spectrum can see. Using combinations of special camera lenses and filters, photographic films and video imaging, the Eisners revealed a bug's-eye world where flowers display patterns that are visible only to insects. Besides making a target on the part of the flower where nectar and pollen occur, the distinctive patterns also are believed to help insects recognize a familiar flower among a field of competing images.

"But we had a nagging suspicion that the ultraviolet-absorbing pigments had other functions for the plant," recalled graduate student Bezzerides, who subsequently helped to demonstrate toxicity and a deterrent effect of the chemicals. "We wondered if the chemicals originally served the plants as a sunscreen against ultraviolet radiation."
